SCOOBY TRILLON

The Art of Elegance

An Icon of Art and Style

SCOOBY TRILLON'S, journey to becoming the head designer of The 3 Art Ninjas is one shaped by creativity, discipline, and an eye for the extraordinary. Born in Washington, D.C., and raised in the South, Scooby grew up surrounded by an artistic family that fueled his curiosity. By the age of five, he was already practicing martial arts, later achieving black belts in multiple disciplines. His talents didn't stop there—he excelled in music, gymnastics, painting, and, eventually, fashion design.

After moving to Los Angeles, Scooby performed and danced on television and at exclusive events alongside stars like Tom Cruise and John Travolta, bringing energy and originality to the stage. However, it was his shift to fashion that allowed him to fully express his creativity. With The 3 Art Ninjas, Scooby has become a sought-after designer for clients ranging from professional athletes to international royalty. His team's creations have appeared at major events like the Oscars, Emmys, and the Obama Inauguration, earning them a reputation for bold, custom-made designs that make an unforgettable impression.

From their signature hats and intricate jackets to their breathtaking dresses, The 3 Art Ninjas are known for creating garments that feel both artistic and wearable. Drawing influence from the Old West, Egyptian art, African heritage, and icons like Michael Jackson, each piece is designed with a unique story in mind. Their shows incorporate live performances, custom RELIC guitars, and distinctive models, including the tallest female model in the world, delivering an experience that captivates audiences.

Looking ahead, Scooby and his team are preparing for a monumental show at the Pyramids of Egypt in 2025, where more than 15,000 attendees are expected. They also aim to participate in major fashion weeks across cities like New York, Paris, Milan, London, and Brazil, while making their garments available to a broader audience. A portion of the proceeds will support initiatives for children and homeless rehabilitation, aligning their art with their values.

Scooby emphasizes the joy of collaboration and the memories created during long nights spent designing. For him, seeing models take the runway with confidence and excitement is the ultimate reward. He also finds time to give back, organizing shows for underprivileged communities and mentoring young talent.

Alongside his work in fashion, Scooby recently authored a book offering advice on relationships, sharing his insights with humor and relatability. With a focus on creativity and connection, Scooby Trillon continues to make an impact on and off the runway.

Claudia Cenderelli

She transformed a simple idea into a must-have for anyone on the move

Stay Fresh, Stay Stylish

CLAUDIA CENDERELLI'S creativity has transformed a common frustration into a must-have accessory. Her product, BORSA FRESCA, is an innovative cosmetic bag designed to protect makeup from the intense summer heat. Maintaining an inner temperature of 65–70 degrees Fahrenheit, the bag keeps beauty products intact, preventing them from melting, oxidizing, or losing their quality.

Made with durable neoprene, BORSA FRESCA is water and heat-resistant, featuring two reusable ice packs that elevate its cooling capability. While it functions well without the ice packs, its versatility extends beyond cosmetics. It has been used to keep cell phones from overheating and even to accompany users into saunas, safeguarding devices while playing music or podcasts. The bag's design is equally stylish, offering options to carry it as a purse with a strap or as a wristlet for added functionality.

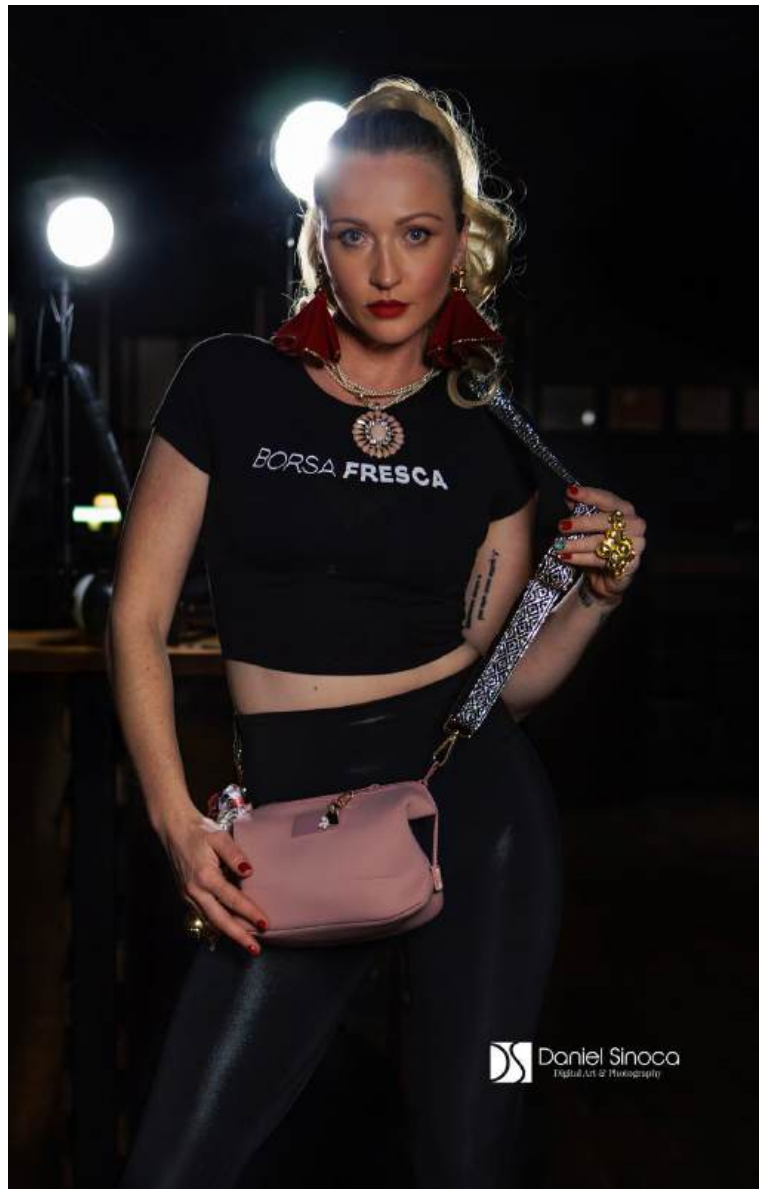

The concept originated over 26 years ago when Claudia, a busy multitasker, grew tired of her makeup melting in her car or her sunscreen and lotions being ruined during outdoor adventures. Her innovative solution was born from a real need, one many can relate to, and it has since grown into a practical yet chic solution for everyday life.

Juggling careers in real estate and human services, Claudia acknowledges the challenges of managing her time and introducing a brand-new product to the market. "Promoting something entirely new takes time and effort, even with the advantages of social media," she shares. Despite these hurdles her passion and persistence remain unwavering.

Outside of her professional endeavors, Claudia finds joy in her family, her four dogs, and her love of nature, interior design, and fashion. Cooking, learning, and fostering strong friendships are her ways of staying inspired.

Her advice for others reflects her philosophy:

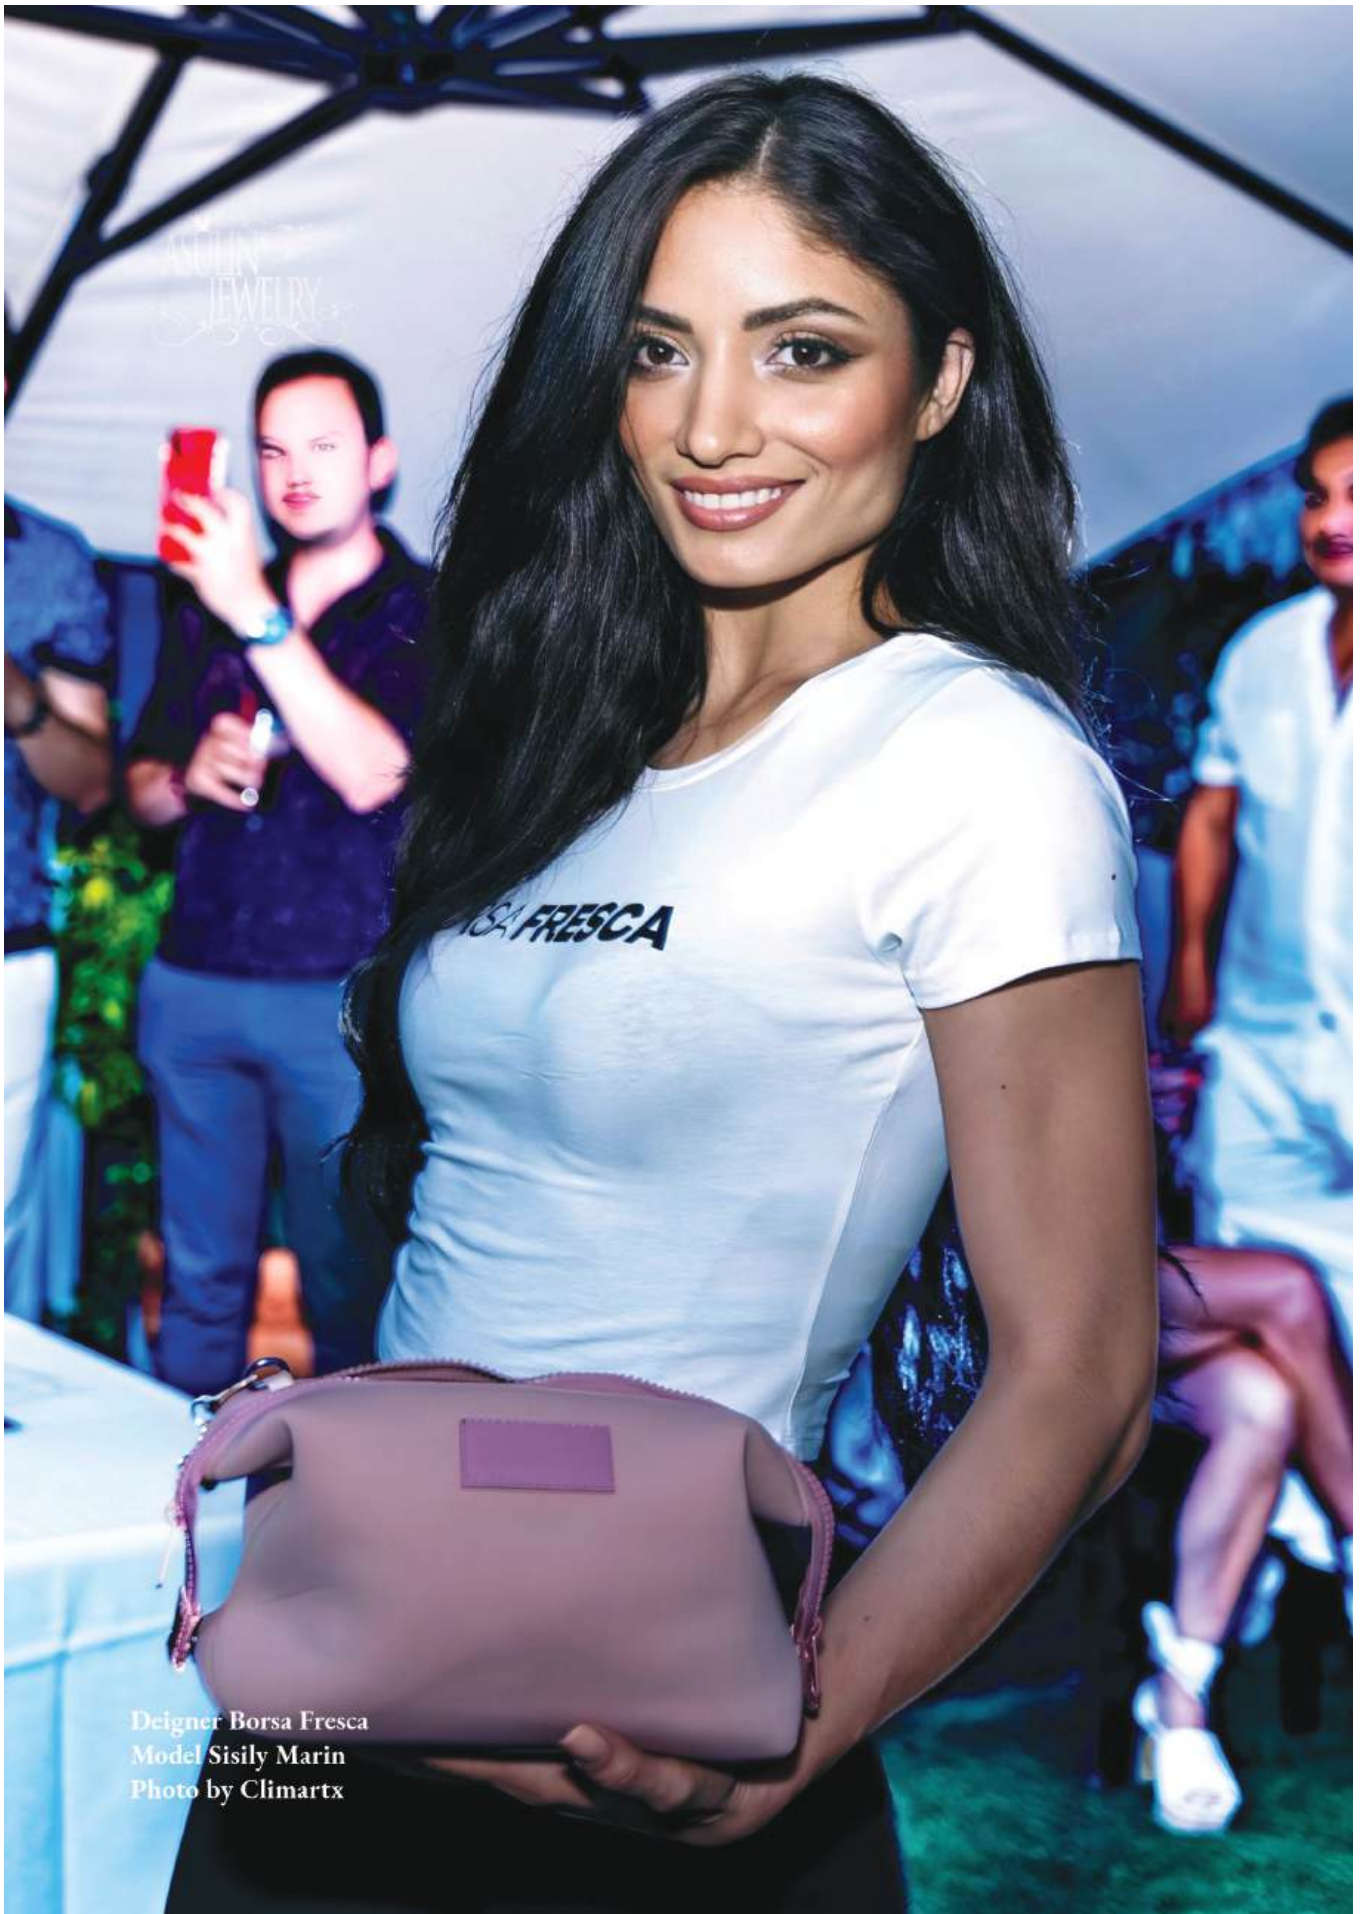

"Stay curious, creative, and grateful. There's always something to appreciate in life."

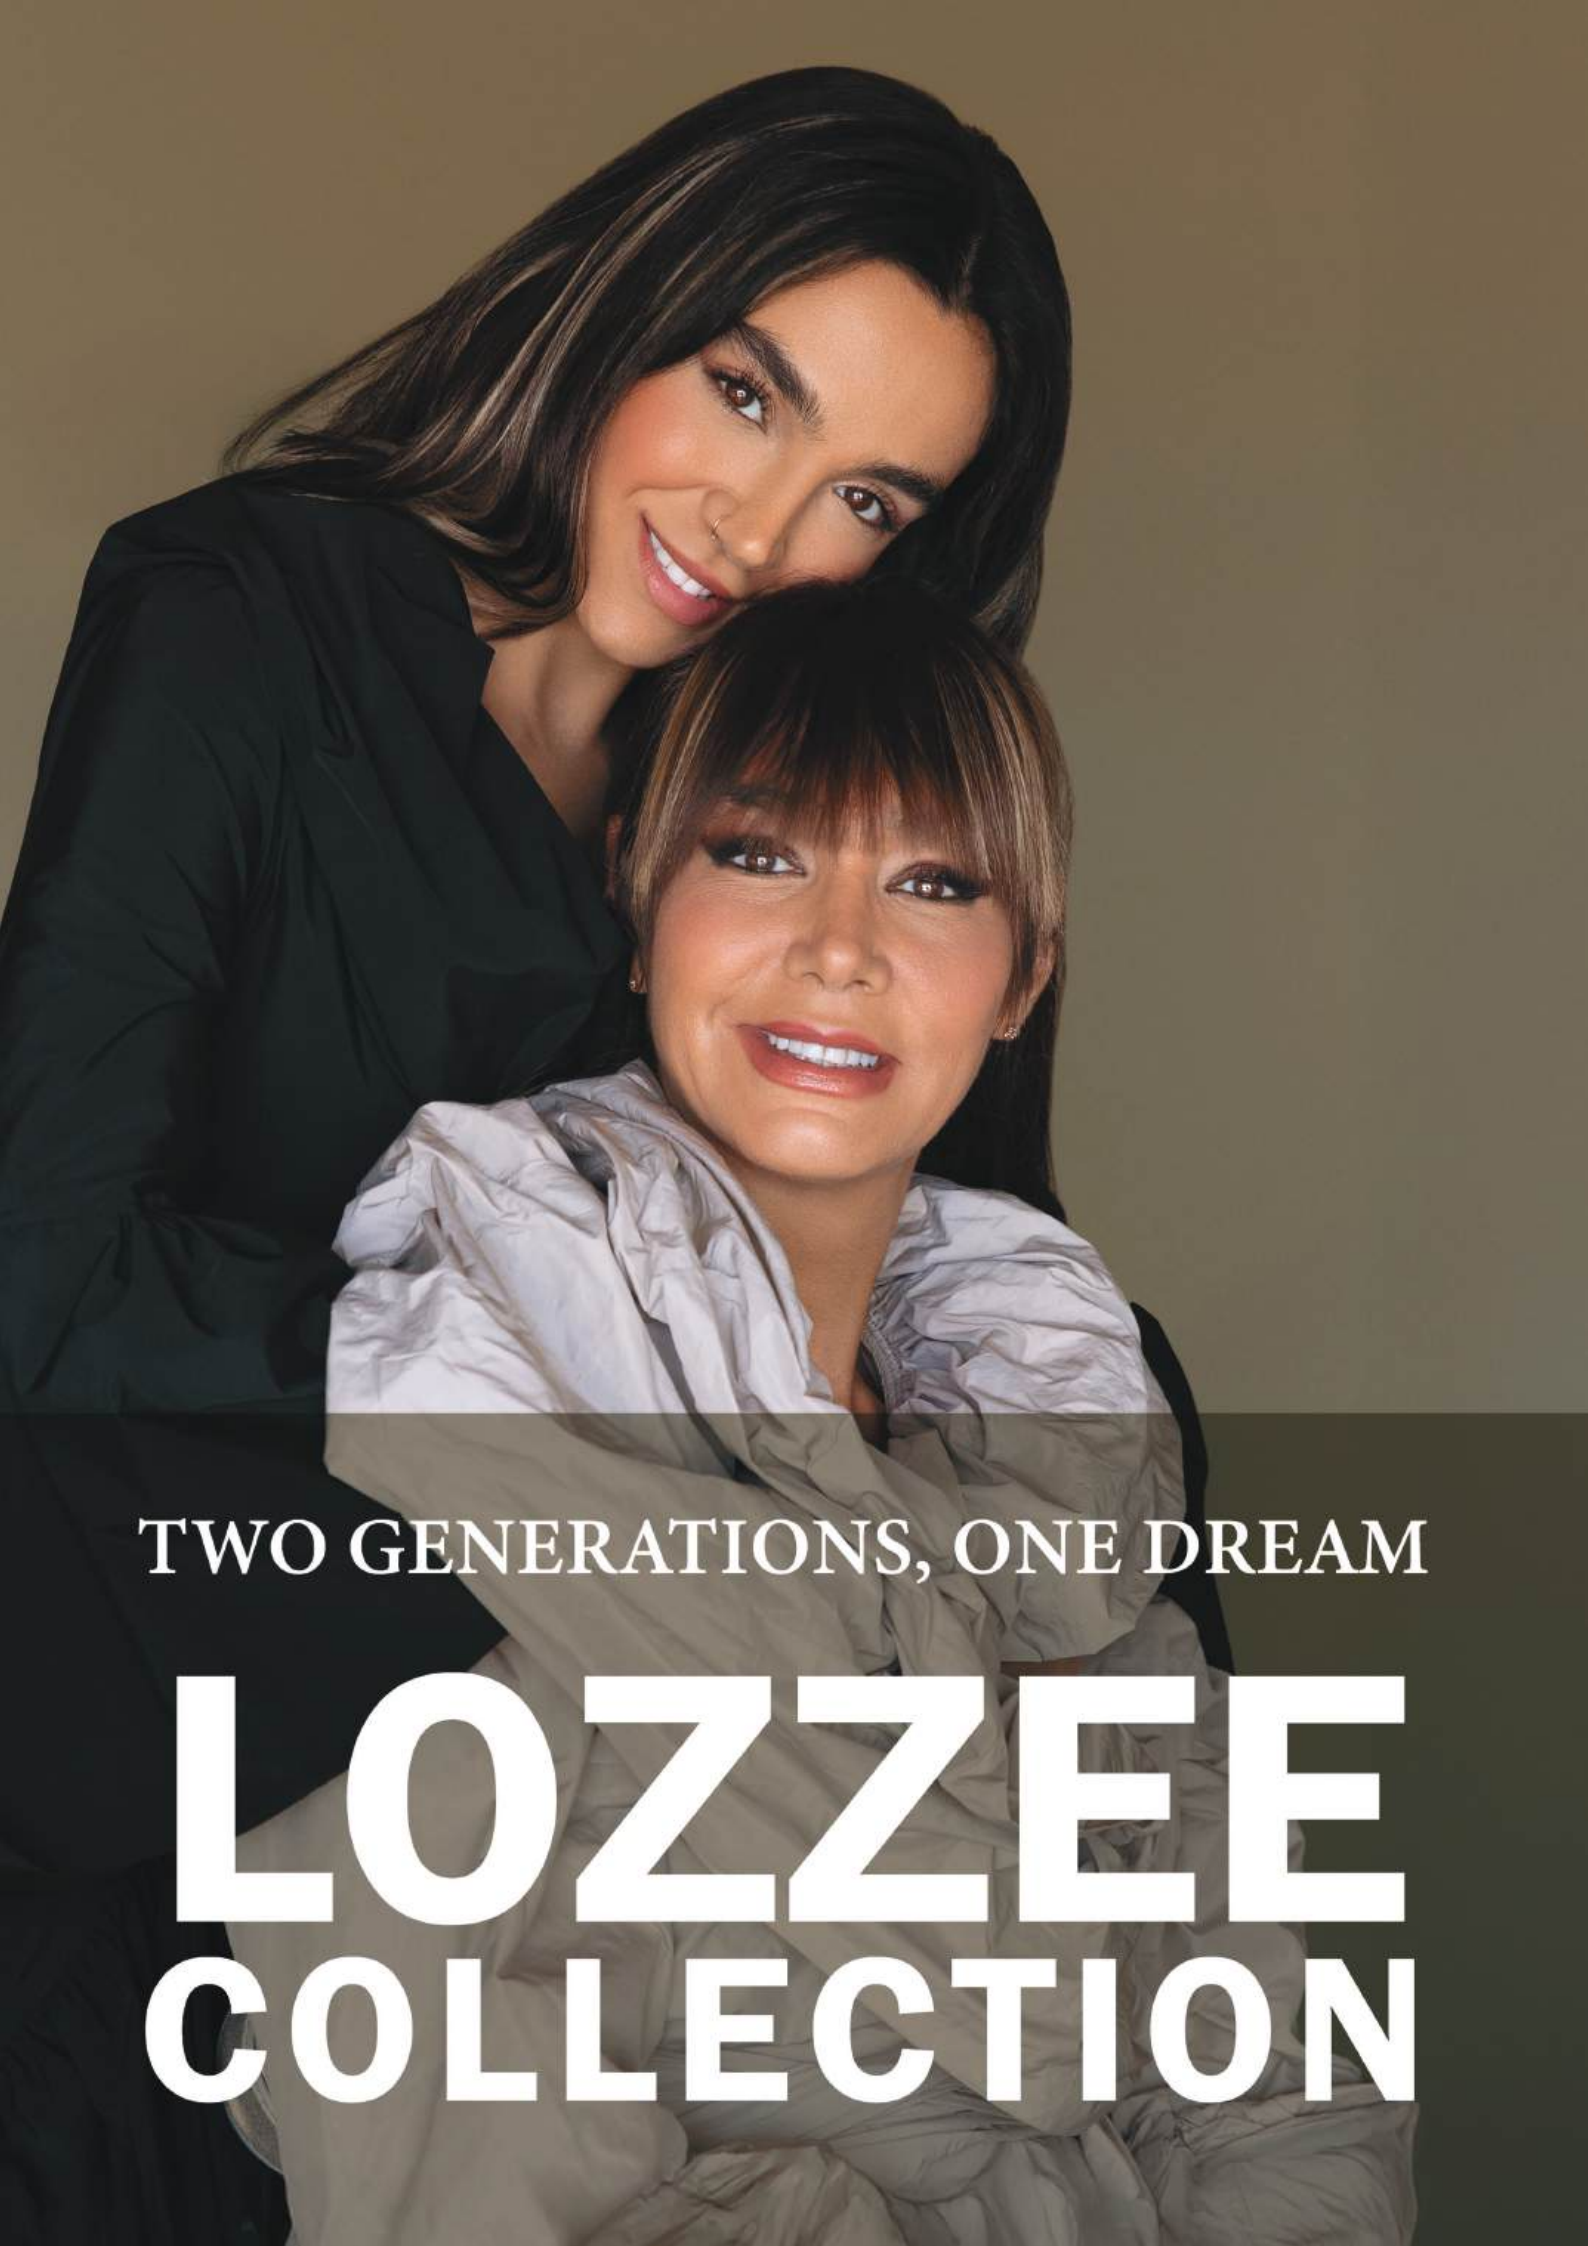

Claudia's story and her BORSA FRESCA bag show that even small inconveniences can spark big ideas, leading to innovative solutions that enhance everyday life.

TWO GENERATIONS, ONE DREAM

LOZZEE COLLECTION

Effortless elegance in every detail

NEDA MOAREFI AND SARA SHAHABEDDIN didn't set out to follow trends. The mother and daughter boutique, Lozzee, is a reflection of something much more personal—their love of precision, balance, and design rooted in heritage. Lozzee's aesthetic centers around geometric forms, with every piece shaped by a clear purpose. It's not loud or overstated; it's about clean lines, subtle details, and the kind of elegance that makes you pause.

The brand's name, drawn from the Persian word for "rhombus" or "diamond shape," gives a clue to the story behind it. These shapes aren't just a design choice for Neda and Sara; they represent structure and clarity, concepts woven into the fabric of Lozzee's clothing. Neda, with over 30 years in fashion design, has always believed that the best designs are the ones that feel effortless, no matter how complex they are to create. Sara, stepping into this world alongside her mother, brings her own perspective, one that is both fresh and deeply respectful of the foundations Neda has built. For both of them, Lozzee isn't about making noise in the fashion world. It's about creating something steady, grounded, and precise. "My mother has always taught me that the quietest details often make the loudest impact," Sara says. Their designs reflect this philosophy, favoring a meticulous, thoughtful approach over fleeting trends or unnecessary embellishments.

What's unique about Lozzee is how its pieces feel deliberate. They're not designed to dominate a room—they're made to complement the person wearing them, like an understated frame around a work of art.

This is something Neda understands well. "Good design never outshines the individual," she says. "It enhances them."

In a world of fast fashion and disposable trends, Lozzee feels almost out of place—but perhaps that's the point.

There's a quiet confidence in their work, a willingness to take their time and get it right. Whether it's a perfectly tailored skirt or a jacket with just the right amount of structure, Lozzee's pieces aren't rushed. They're made to last.

This mother-daughter partnership isn't about following the industry's tempo. It's about crafting their own rhythm, one thoughtful design at a time.

UNWAY BEAUTIES

Designed for You

GALIA ASULIN stands out in a world where craftsmanship is often overshadowed by mass production, offering designs that are as personal as they are timeless.

For more than 45 years, she has been creating unique, handcrafted jewelry that embodies the individuality of each wearer. Her creations go beyond mere accessories—they weave stories, preserve memories, and honor the connections that make life meaningful.

Galia's store in the Valley was more than a retail space—it was a gathering place. Women from all walks of life came not only to browse her exquisite creations but also to participate in workshops where they could explore their own artistic talents. The seniors' club she hosted brought at her store together a community of creativity, where the joy of making and sharing resonated beyond the confines of jewelry. It was this sense of connection that made her store a beloved destination.

Her collection is as versatile as it is beautiful. From elegant necklaces and mineral stone pieces to her unique men's line and breathtaking bridal jewelry, Galia's designs cater to a wide array of tastes. Each piece is carefully crafted, combining the raw allure of natural stones with modern aesthetics. Her use of gold-filled and silver-plated elements creates jewelry that feels luxurious yet accessible.

For Galia, the journey has been far from easy, but her accomplishments speak for themselves. Seeing her pieces worn by celebrities and featured on runways across the U.S. and Europe stands out as one of her proudest achievements. "It's incredible to see something I created become part of someone else's moment," she says, reflecting on her success.

What sets Galia apart is her unwavering dedication to the people she designs for. Her inspiration comes not from trends or fleeting fashions but from the genuine enthusiasm of her customers. "When people come back, excited to see what I've made next, that's what keeps me going," she says. Galia's advice for aspiring designers is refreshingly honest. "Don't let commercialism take over what you love. Stay true to your craft and keep the connections you make with others meaningful," she urges. Her words, much like her designs, carry a weight that feels authentic and rare.

As Galia continues to create, her work reflects the enduring value of thoughtful craftsmanship and genuine connection. In a world that often prioritizes speed and volume, her jewelry serves as a reminder of the beauty in slowing down, focusing on detail, and honoring the personal stories behind each piece. For those who wear her designs, they carry not just an accessory but a meaningful expression of individuality and care.

Tannaz Amirian

Merging tradition with modern sensibility

A NEW CHAPTER IN LUXURY

TANNAZ AMIRIAN has always been drawn to design as a way to tell meaningful stories. With over eight years in the fashion world, her work reflects a deep respect for heritage and a keen understanding of modern elegance. For Tannaz, jewelry isn't just an accessory—it's a personal expression. Her pieces are created to connect with people, evoking a sense of identity and cultural pride.

As the founder of BAHARNAZ, Tannaz has built a brand that reflects her vision for luxury jewelry with a soul. Inspired by the rich artistry of Persian calligraphy and traditional patterns, she designs jewelry that feels timeless yet fresh. Working closely with skilled artisans, she ensures every piece carries the same care and attention to detail that defines her brand. For Tannaz, the process is as important as the result.

BAHARNAZ Jewelry: More Than Accessories

At the core of BAHARNAZ is a philosophy: jewelry should mean something. Each piece is a celebration of individuality and cultural heritage. From bold statement necklaces to delicate earrings, the designs reflect intricate craftsmanship and a thoughtful approach. Persian-inspired details, like hand-cut calligraphy patterns and refined embroidery, make each piece unique.

The materials used in BAHARNAZ's collections are as exceptional as the designs themselves. Tulle, leather, and fine metals are transformed into jewelry that feels both luxurious and personal. Every element is carefully chosen to complement the artistry and ensure the wearer feels a connection to their piece.

Running BAHARNAZ hasn't been without its challenges. Tannaz has worked tirelessly to maintain the balance between creating high-quality designs and making them accessible. She's also navigated the complexities of incorporating cultural themes into a modern market. Yet through it all, her focus has remained on delivering jewelry that resonates with clients on a personal level.

For Tannaz, seeing someone wear her designs and feel empowered by them is what makes it all worthwhile. BAHARNAZ isn't just about creating beautiful pieces; it's about offering something meaningful and authentic.

BUILDING NAUGHTY & NICE BEAUTY

How Rogelio and Isabel Cortez created a brand that celebrates all sides of beauty

ROGELIO CORTEZ JR. and ISABEL CORTEZ, are the creators of Naughty & Nice Beauty, a brand born from their combined expertise and shared vision. Their story reflects a partnership built on hard work, creativity, and a commitment to offering products that people can connect with and trust.

Rogelio started his career at 18, stepping into the world of cosmetic manufacturing with companies like Neutrogena, Revlon, and L'Oréal. These experiences gave him a deep understanding of the processes involved in making quality beauty products. Later, he worked with brands like Anastasia Beverly Hills, where he learned the importance of blending creativity with the practical side of the business. His years of experience gave him the skills to approach beauty as both an art and a science.

For Isabel, the connection to beauty began during her childhood in Mexico, where she admired the way makeup transformed the women she saw on television. After working in sales and raising a family, she found herself drawn to the idea of building something that combined her love for beauty with her drive to help others feel confident. When the pandemic brought significant changes, it also gave them the opportunity to pursue their dream of starting Naughty & Nice Beauty together.

The brand launched during an uncertain time, but Rogelio and Isabel brought their strengths to every decision. Rogelio relied on his expertise in creating products that customers could rely on, while Isabel focused on building something that reflected their values and connected with people in an authentic way. They understood that their brand needed to be more than just cosmetics—it had to be about offering something that felt real and approachable.

Today, Naughty & Nice Beauty stands as a brand that celebrates all sides of beauty. For Rogelio and Isabel, it's not just about selling cosmetics; it's about creating something meaningful that resonates with people on a personal level. Their products are designed to inspire individuality, whether someone embraces their daring "naughty" side or their elegant "nice" side.

As they continue to grow, Rogelio and Isabel aim to expand their brand while staying true to what they've built so far. For them, it's about reaching more people and building a brand that customers can rely on for years to come.

A woman with long blonde hair, wearing a black wide-brimmed hat and a red sleeveless dress, is sitting in a desert landscape. Valeriia Komova

Beauty in every step, finding harmony between the fast-paced world of modeling and family

Fashion and Family

VALERIIA KOMOVA, originally from Russia, moved to Los Angeles just over two years ago, embracing a new chapter in her life. During this time, she not only pursued her modeling career but also took on the rewarding and demanding role of motherhood. Her daughter, Emiliya, who recently turned two, is a constant source of joy and inspiration. Valeriia's ability to manage both her professional goals and her personal life is nothing short of impressive.

Specializing in beauty, e-commerce, and lifestyle photography, Valeriia has worked with some of the industry's most talented designers and photographers. Her collaborations have taken her to high-profile events, including LA Fashion Week, where her presence on the runway garnered attention for her poise and confidence. These experiences have shaped her career and opened doors to exciting opportunities. Yet, she remains grounded, focusing on creating meaningful connections through her work.

One of the biggest challenges Valeriia has faced is finding harmony between her career and her responsibilities as a mother. "It's not always easy to balance the two," she admits. "But I've learned to prioritize quality time with my daughter while also dedicating myself to achieving my goals." This commitment has allowed her to thrive both personally and professionally, serving as a role model for other women navigating similar paths.

Valeriia's work extends beyond traditional modeling. Through her social media platforms, she connects with a growing audience, sharing content that celebrates beauty, fashion, and self-expression. Her online presence is an extension of her creative endeavors, offering a space where followers can find inspiration and encouragement. When asked about what makes her happiest, Valeriia's answer is simple: creativity and connection. "I love expressing myself through my work and inspiring others to feel confident in their own skin," she explains. This mindset has fueled her drive to expand her career further, with dreams of being featured in top magazines, gracing billboards, and working with globally recognized brands. Travel is also high on her list, as she hopes to explore the world while growing her community and reaching new audiences.

For those seeking advice, Valeriia's message is clear: "Believe in yourself, stay focused on what brings you joy, and don't let obstacles discourage you. Originally hailing from Austin, Texas, Haley has embraced the West Coast lifestyle with open arms, blending the high-energy demands of her modeling career with a full-time role as a hotel manager in Culver City.

Her entry into the modeling world is the kind of story that seems too good to be true. "I was discovered at Del Taco," Haley recalls with a laugh. "I was eating lunch, and someone approached me about doing a runway show. It was my first, but definitely not my last." That unexpected moment launched her into a whirlwind of opportunities, and she hasn't looked back since.

growth in both areas of my life." This balance, she says, has become part of what drives her to push forward every day. When she's not walking the runway or working the camera, Haley indulges in a love of sneakers, a passion that keeps her grounded. "I'm a regular at Cool Kicks on Melrose and The Grove. Sneakers make me happy, and so does a great cup of coffee. I'm easy to please."

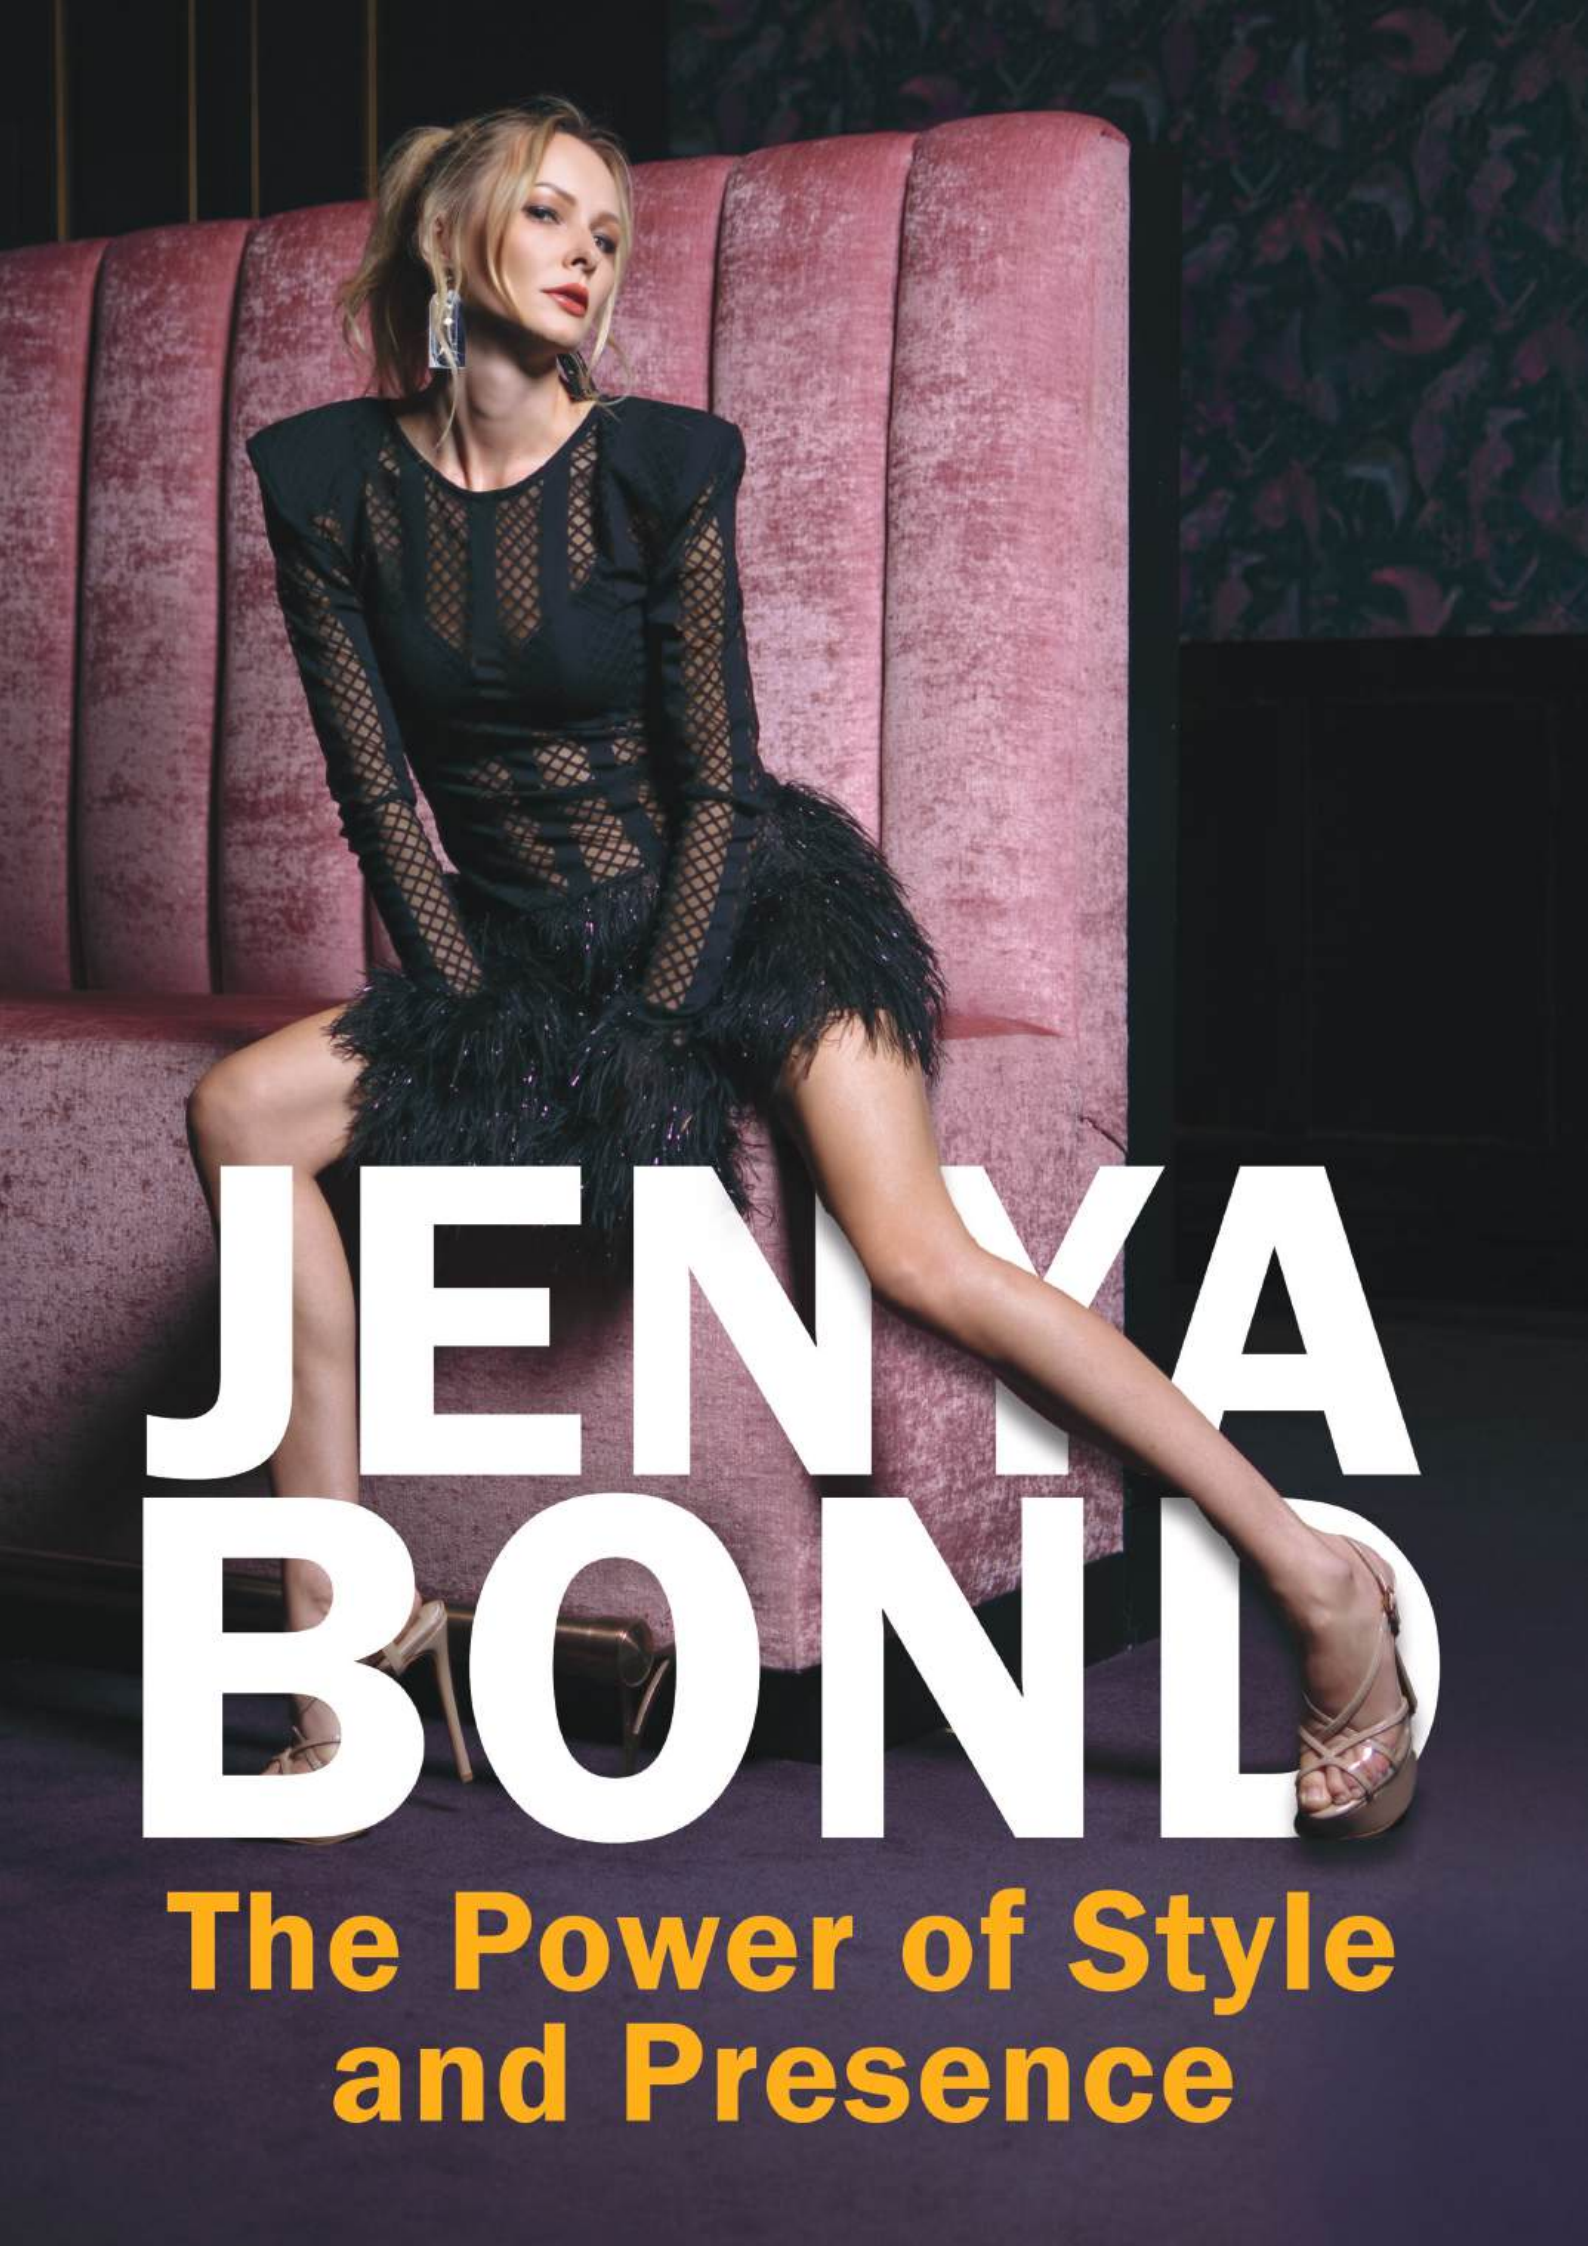

As for her goals, Haley is looking ahead to new opportunities. "This year, I want to walk for more of my favorite brands and meet more people in the industry. Expanding my network and refining my craft are always on my mind." Her advice for humanity, though simple, resonates deeply: "Treat others as you'd want to be treated. Be kind—it really is that simple."

Breaking Barriers and Building Dreams

CARSON KRESS is no stranger to adversity. From his early days running under the moonlit skies of East Texas to his time as a Marine Corps infantryman, life has tested him in more ways than most. But it's through those tests that Carson has built a life defined by resilience and reinvention.

Growing up, Carson found clarity in the quiet of East Texas nights. His evening runs became a time to think, to question, and to dream. Those trails eventually gave way to far-flung landscapes as Carson joined the Marine Corps, where his experiences took him to the jungles of Guam and the coral reefs of Okinawa. Beyond his military responsibilities, he discovered a deep connection to Muay Thai, competing in bouts at venues like the Anaheim Convention Center. Fighting gave him an outlet, a way to channel his competitive nature and push his limits.

However, life took a sharp turn when Carson sustained serious injuries during his service. Months of recovery brought physical pain and emotional struggles. The isolation and frustration threatened to pull him into a darker place, echoing the uncertainty he faced as a homeless teenager living in his car. But Carson wasn't about to let those feelings take control. He began searching for new opportunities.

A friend from his Marine days introduced him to acting in Los Angeles, a suggestion that quickly changed the course of his life. Acting brought Carson into a world of creativity and connection, leading him to modeling opportunities on some of the industry's biggest stages. He walked for Los Angeles Fashion Week, Orange County Fashion Week, and multiple shows under Leila's RLC agency. Designers like the "3 Art Ninjas" recognized his potential, selecting him as one of their standout models.

ERIC ROBERTS

A Career That Continues to Captive Audiences

Intensity Personified Onscreen

ERIC ROBERTS has been a recognizable figure in Hollywood for decades, with a career spanning over 700 roles in film and television. Born on April 18, 1956, in Biloxi, Mississippi, he grew up in a creative household that seemed to set the stage for a life in the arts. His parents, Betty Lou Bredemus and Walter Grady Roberts, ran a children's acting school in Atlanta, Georgia, where Eric and his siblings first discovered their love for performance.

Talent runs deep in the Roberts family. Eric's younger sister, Julia Roberts, became one of the most celebrated actors of her generation. While their relationship has had its ups and downs, they've reconnected in recent years, sharing holidays and family moments. Eric is also the proud father of actress Emma Roberts, whose career in television and film continues to shine. Watching Emma succeed is something Eric has often described as one of the greatest joys of his life.

Roberts' introduction to the screen came through soap operas, with early roles on How to Survive a Marriage in 1974 and Another World in 1977. While he's joked about being "the worst soap actor ever," those days laid the groundwork for a career that would soon take off in remarkable fashion. His first major film role in King of the Gypsies (1978) showcased a raw talent that Hollywood couldn't ignore. His portrayal of Dave Stepanowicz earned him a Golden Globe nomination, a sign of the promise he carried into the following decade.

The 1980s brought a string of performances that solidified Roberts' reputation as a compelling actor. In Star 80 (1983), he delivered a chilling portrayal of Paul Snider, a manipulative and deeply flawed figure at the heart of Dorothy Stratten's tragic story. Around the same time, Roberts paired with Mickey Rourke in The Pope of Greenwich Village (1984), creating one of the decade's most memorable on-screen dynamics. His role as Paulie, the impulsive yet endearing gambler, added layers to a film known for its grit and authenticity.

Then came Runaway Train (1985), a performance that truly set Roberts apart. Playing Buck, a convict on the run aboard a doomed train, he brought a mix of intensity and vulnerability that earned him an Academy Award nomination for Best Supporting Actor. To this day, critics and fans alike consider it one of his finest performances.

In 1981, he was in a near-fatal car accident that left him with a broken arm, a bruised brain, and severe facial injuries. He spent three days in a coma, underwent extensive surgeries, and had to learn how to speak again. It was a moment that tested him, but Roberts emerged with a renewed sense of purpose. He continued to act through these challenges, taking on roles that ranged from critically acclaimed films to unconventional projects that showcased his willingness to experiment.

Roberts' filmography is as diverse as it is extensive. For every high-profile movie, he has taken on smaller, niche projects that allowed him to explore different aspects of his craft.

In The Coca-Cola Kid (1985), he played a quirky marketing executive, showing his knack for blending humor and charm. Later, in Best of the Best (1989), he embodied Alex Grady, a martial artist with a personal story that resonated with audiences. His ability to connect with viewers through these roles cemented his status as a favorite in cult cinema.

By the late 1990s, Roberts had developed a reputation as one of Hollywood's hardest-working actors. His choices weren't bound by traditional expectations, and he continued to embrace a wide range of roles, from thrillers to melodramas. It's not uncommon to see him playing a villain in one film, a comic foil in another, and then popping up in a television series for good measure. As he once said, "I just love being on set. That's where I feel most alive."

Even as trends in the entertainment industry evolved, Roberts remained a constant. In The Dark Knight (2008), he portrayed Salvatore Maroni, a powerful crime boss who added depth to the film's already stellar cast. A few years later, he joined The Expendables (2010), appearing alongside action icons like Sylvester Stallone and Jason Statham. These roles reminded audiences of Roberts' ability to bring authenticity to every project.

Television became another avenue for Roberts' talents. He appeared in hit series like Heroes and Suits, always adding his unique touch to the characters he portrayed. And then there's his unexpected cameo in Rihanna's music video for Bitch Better Have My Money, where he played a reimagined role after being deemed "too fine" to kill—a story he retells with good humor and pride.

Eric Roberts' wife, Eliza Roberts, and Leila Ciganaglini

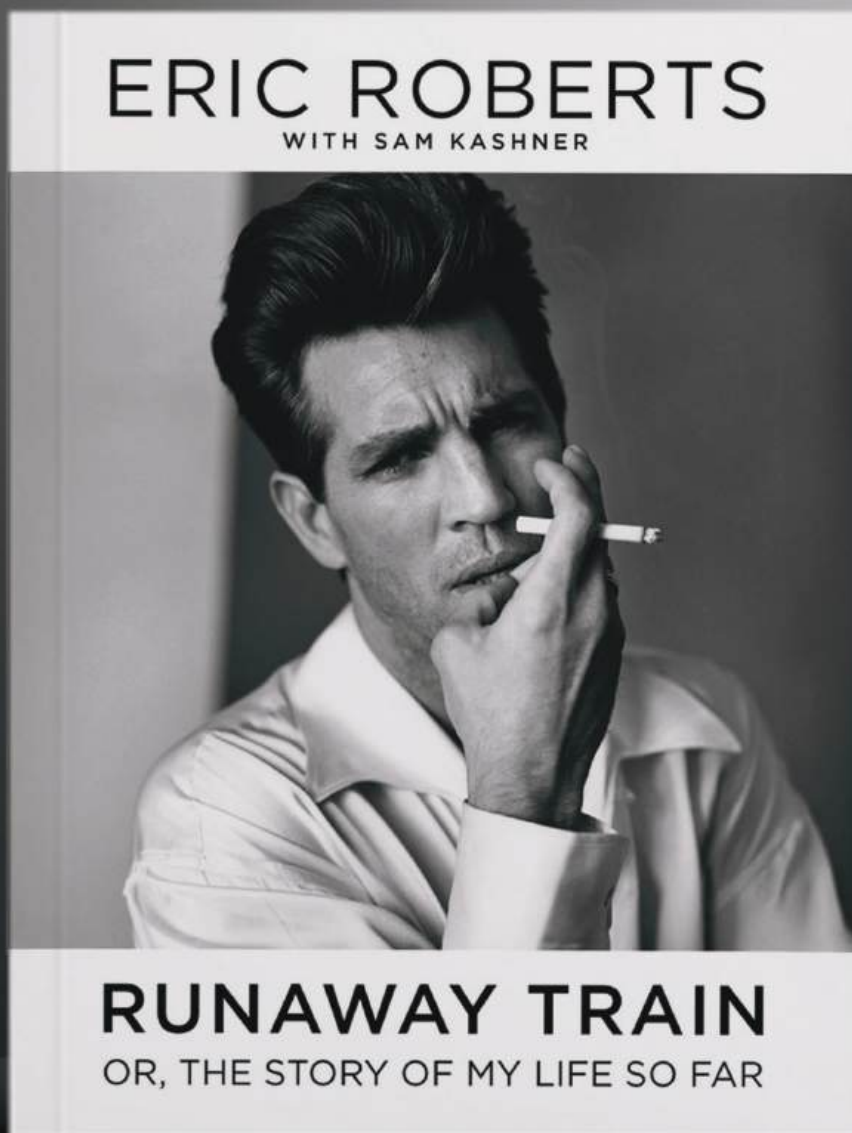

As of 2025, Roberts continues to defy expectations with a steady stream of projects. Whether appearing in an indie drama, a blockbuster, or a short film, he approaches every role with enthusiasm and a love for the craft. His memoir, Runaway Train: The Story of My Life So Far, gives readers an honest glimpse into the life of an actor who has seen and done it all. With over 700 credits to his name, Roberts is living proof that success in Hollywood isn't about following a single path—it's about creating your own.

Eric Roberts' career is a story of perseverance, creativity, and an unyielding dedication to storytelling. From the young actor who captivated audiences in King of the Gypsies to the seasoned performer who continues to explore new roles, he remains a vibrant force in the world of entertainment. For Roberts, it's never been about the spotlight—it's about the work, and his work speaks volumes.

■ Jessica ■ ■ McMillin ■

■ How working behind the scenes led her to center stage ■

Comedy, Drama, and Everything In Between

Jessica McMillin has navigated a career that includes acting, writing, modeling, and comedy, constantly exploring new ways to bring stories to life. Born in Salt Lake City, Utah, she moved to Los Angeles over 20 years ago and has been a steady presence in its creative circles ever since.

Jessica's first steps in the industry came from her love of filmmaking. After earning her film degree and completing a six-month internship with Universal Pictures, she landed a coveted position as an assistant to one of Hollywood's leading directors. Over the next three years, she worked on blockbuster hits like The Conjuring, Insidious II, and Fast and Furious 7. Working on set taught her the nuances of storytelling—how every piece of the puzzle contributes to the final picture. But as much as she valued the experience, she realized her place wasn't behind the camera.

Stepping into acting wasn't just a career change; it was a leap of faith. Jessica shifted her focus to being in front of the lens, embracing the uncertainty and excitement of the craft. Since then, she's appeared in television shows and commercials for brands like Amazon and O'Keeffe's, as well as landing a role on NCIS: LA. These opportunities have allowed her to showcase her adaptability, whether delivering a subtle moment of emotion or stepping into larger-than-life characters.

Comedy, however, remains her most personal outlet. Whether she's performing stand-up at local venues or developing material at home, Jessica finds joy in connecting with audiences through laughter. Her sets often draw from her own life, turning everyday moments into relatable, laugh-out-loud stories. Still, she's not confined to comedy—her ability to shift gears and take on serious roles shows a depth that keeps her work fresh.

What makes Jessica's career truly stand out is her authenticity. She doesn't box herself into a single identity, instead treating every project as an opportunity to experiment and grow. Whether it's writing, performing, or standing under the lights on stage, she approaches it all with a mix of curiosity and hard-earned skill.

Jessica McMillin isn't focused on chasing fame or fitting into a mold. She's focused on the work—creating, performing, and finding the humanity in every role she takes on. And while she's already achieved so much, it's exciting to imagine where her creativity will take her next.

passion into a remarkable entertainment career

A Dual Passion

Alejandro De Hoyos, an actor and producer originally from Ensenada, Baja California, Mexico, has built a career that reflects his love for creativity and hard work.

His story begins in Acapulco, where his family moved during his teenage years. It was there he first showed his knack for managing entertainment spaces, working at some of the most popular discos in the area. By 22, he was running Magic Circus, the largest private nightclub in Mexico City.

In the 1980s, De Hoyos produced live and televised kickboxing competitions and brought international performers like Sylvester and José José to Mexican audiences.

Despite his success in business, he always felt a pull toward acting. At 30, he decided to pursue his passion seriously. It wasn't an easy decision, as it meant juggling acting lessons, auditions, and a growing family, all while managing his businesses. His acting credits span both television and film. From long-running shows like The Bold and the Beautiful to recent projects such as The Man From Toronto and Trigger Warning, De Hoyos has worked steadily for decades. He's also made a mark behind the camera as a producer. In 2016, he launched Alta California Pictures, with its first project being El Contratista, a film showcasing his ability to tell stories from a different perspective.

De Hoyos speaks openly about the challenges he's faced. "Going to acting lessons and auditioning while running businesses and raising four boys was tough," he admits. But those experiences taught him the value of determination. His ability to balance it all comes down to focusing on what makes him happy. "Peace is what I love most," he shares. "Acting makes me happy, and so does remodeling houses. It's part of my creative side."

Looking to the future, De Hoyos plans to keep acting and producing films. He keeps his long-term goals close to his chest but makes it clear he's far from done. When asked for advice, he keeps it simple: "Find what makes you happy without hurting others and give it your all. When you achieve it, do it again."

Whether he's bringing a character to life on screen, overseeing a film production, or transforming a house with his own hands, Alejandro De Hoyos thrives on creativity in all its forms. His work isn't confined to one medium. For De Hoyos, every project is an opportunity to push boundaries and embrace the things that bring him joy.

VICTOR RIOS

IS JUST GETTING STARTED

A Name on Everyone's Radar

VICTOR RIOS is a director who is catching Hollywood's attention with his keen eye and ability to create powerful stories. Born in Seattle to Puerto Rican parents, Rios grew up experiencing a mix of cultures and lifestyles, thanks to his father's military service. Moving frequently taught him how to adapt, observe, and find inspiration in everyday life—qualities that now influence his work as a filmmaker.

Before stepping into the world of directing, Rios explored several paths. He studied criminology and even pursued amateur boxing. While these experiences may seem far from filmmaking, they shaped his disciplined approach and understanding of people, which he brings to every project. However, his career in film began when he joined the Stella Adler Studio in New York City. Starting as an actor, Rios soon realized that directing gave him the creative control he craved to tell stories in his own way.

His latest film, Wages of Sin, showcases the depth of his talent. The movie stars Danny Trejo, a legendary figure in Hollywood, and their collaboration has been a highlight of Rios's career. "Working with Danny was incredible," Rios said. "He's someone who brings energy and professionalism to every scene, and that raised the bar for everyone involved." Rios credits his success to learning through hands-on experience. He believes that spending time on set offers lessons that no classroom can teach. "I've made mistakes on short films, but fixing those mistakes is how you start to see everything come together," he explained.

Breaking into Hollywood was not an easy task. Building trust among peers and earning opportunities required patience and persistence. Now, with Wages of Sin earning critical acclaim and three festival nominations, including Best Director, Rios has proven that hard work pays off.

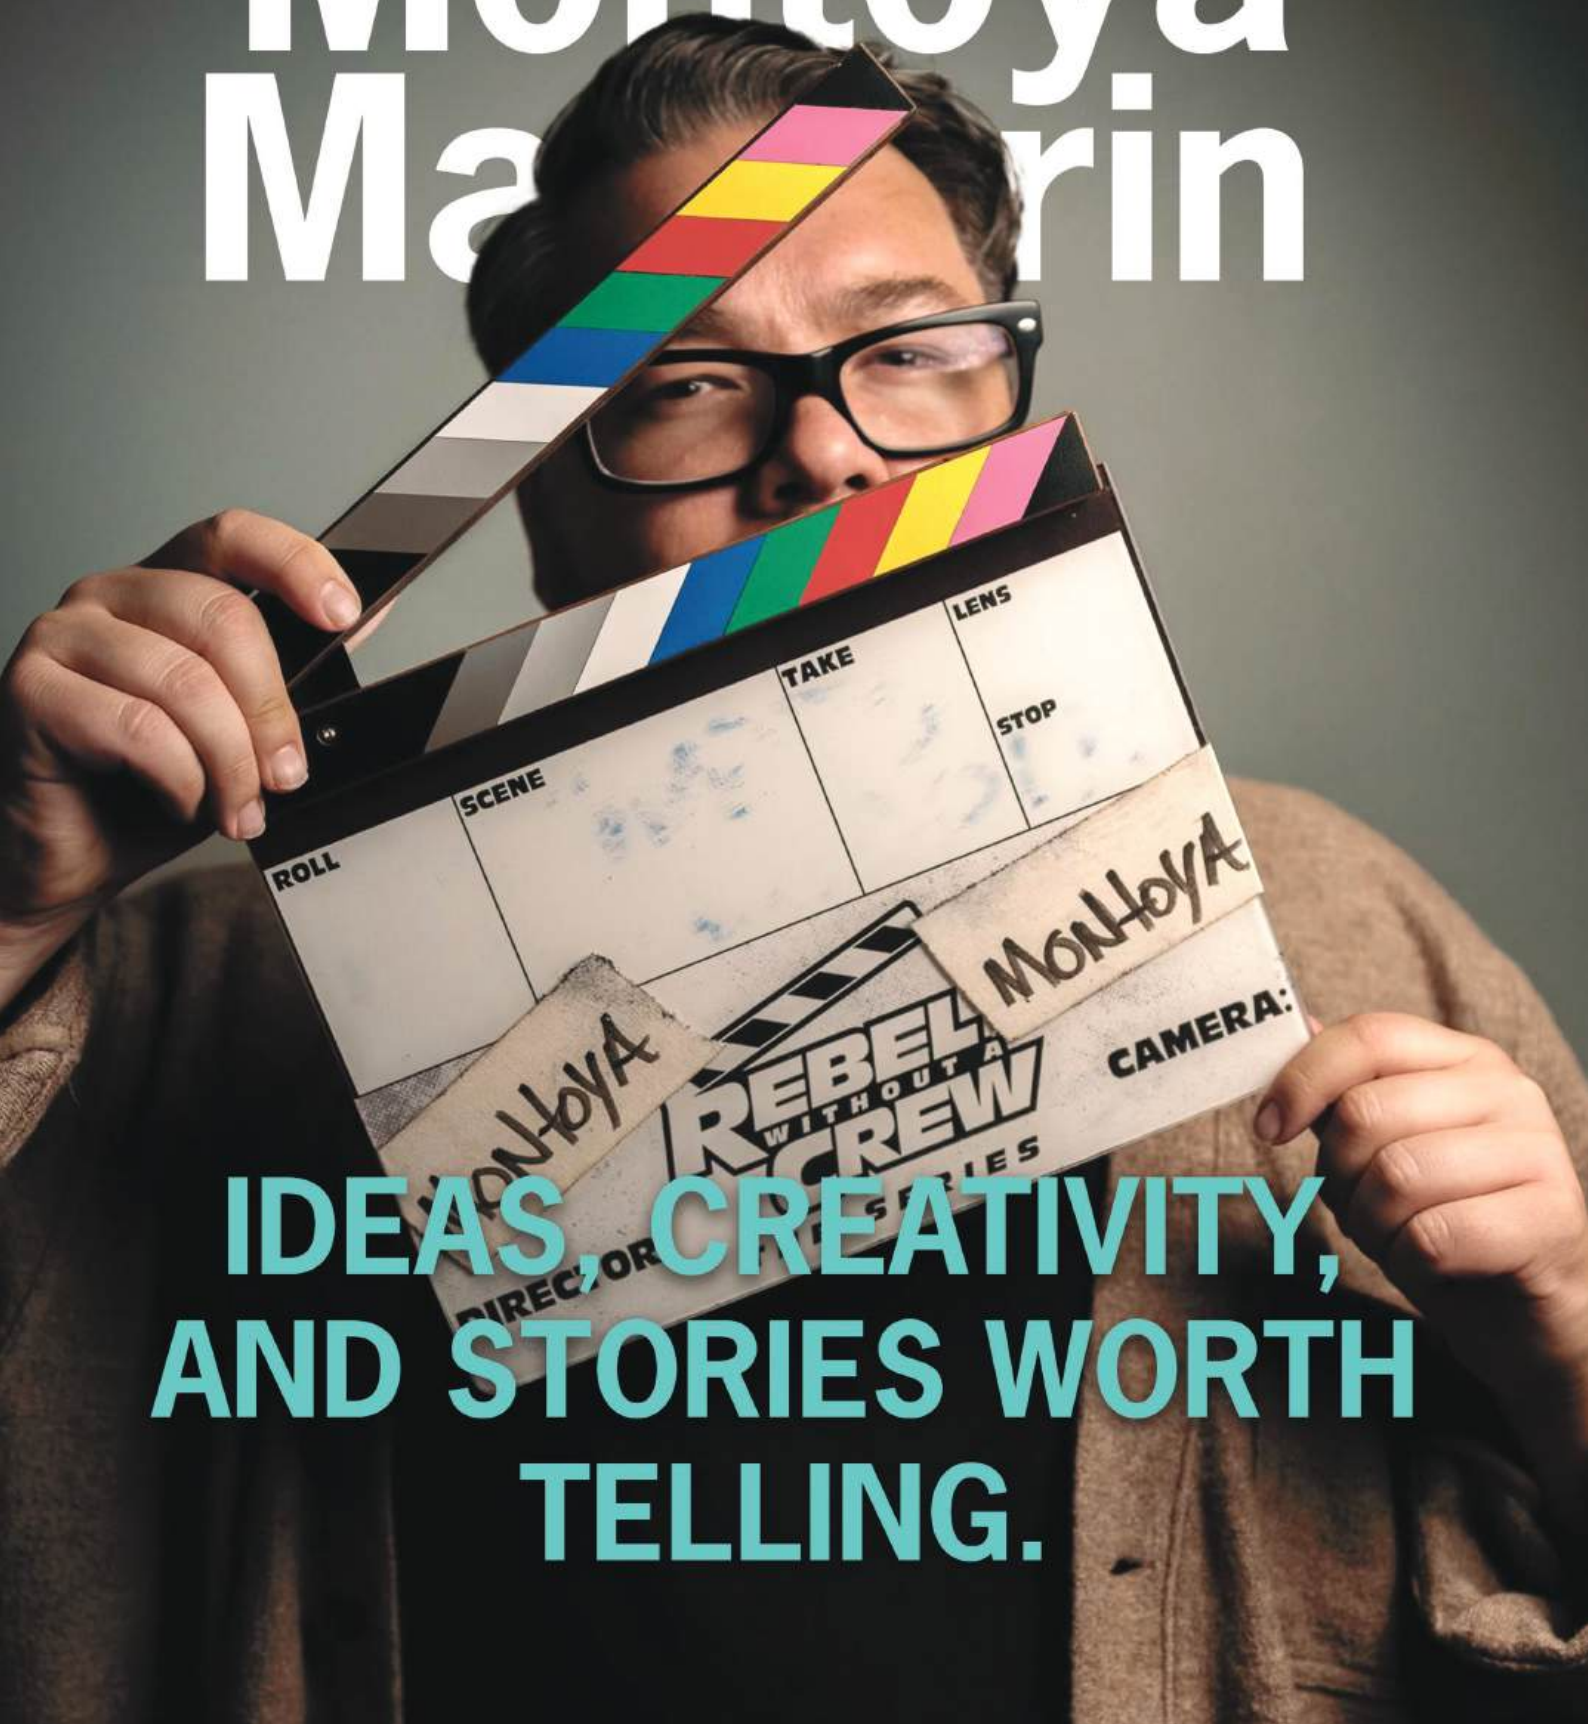

Despite his growing success, Rios stays connected to the values that define him. "Being with my family is what makes me happiest," he shared. Balancing his personal life with a demanding career, he remains focused on his goals: creating meaningful films and raising his children to be good people.

As anticipation for Wages of Sin builds, Rios's advice to others stands out: "Be good, keep learning, and never stop chasing your dreams. You only live once."

Alejandro Montoya Marin

IDEAS, CREATIVITY, AND STORIES WORTH TELLING.

Filmmaking with Talent and Confidence

ALEJANDRO MONTOYA MARÍN has built a reputation as a filmmaker who embraces the challenges of storytelling with unwavering tenacity. Born in Laredo, Texas, and raised in Mexico, his career began with an education at Vancouver Film School, where he sharpened his creative instincts. In 2018, Montoya Marín earned a spot on director Robert Rodriguez’s Rebel Without a Crew, a groundbreaking documentary series that tested filmmakers by giving them minimal resources.

His debut feature film, Monday, emerged from this project and went on to screen at the SXSW Film Festival, a milestone for any director.

His second feature, Millennium Bugs, showcased his ability to work against the odds. Fully crowdfunded, the film found its audience and distribution through Indican Pictures. These experiences, while demanding, have only fueled Montoya Marín’s love for the creative process. He recalls, “You have to like the taste of challenges,” summing up his career with characteristic humor. Recognition came in waves. In 2022, Montoya Marín was inducted into the New Mexico Film Hall of Fame, an honor that reflects his contributions to the industry and his cultural roots. The following year, he co-starred in Eva Longoria’s Flamin’ Hot and became a member of the Directors Guild of America. These achievements marked him not just as a filmmaker but as a storyteller unafraid to evolve.

His latest feature, The Unexpected, drew critical acclaim when it was highlighted by the Los Angeles Times as one of the “8 Films to Watch” at the 2024 Los Angeles Latino International Film Festival. Praised by critic Carlos Aguilar for its fresh perspective, the film solidified Montoya Marín’s place in the independent film scene. Now, he’s diving into 90 Days in the 90’s, an adaptation of a novel that promises another unique take on storytelling.

For Montoya Marín, filmmaking is as much about the people as it is about the craft. He credits family, friends, good food, and his projects as the foundation of his happiness. His goals are refreshingly straightforward: to create meaningful work and leave a positive impression on the people in his life. Asked about his advice to the world, he keeps it simple: “Be nicer.”

Montoya Marín continues to push the boundaries of what independent filmmaking can achieve, proving that creativity and persistence make an unstoppable combination.

creating spaces where creativity flourishes

Bringing Art to Life in Los Angeles

Aziza Azizova has spent decades transforming her love for art and culture into meaningful contributions that inspire others. As the Founder and CEO of AzziArt Gallery LA, she has established a place where creativity thrives, connections are made, and ideas come to life. Her work goes beyond displaying art—it's about fostering an environment where people can learn, collaborate, and find new ways to express themselves.

Originally from Kazakhstan, Aziza's background is as varied as the art she curates. With degrees in economics, business analysis, accounting, and auditing, she spent years teaching at universities and working in the financial sector as a jewelry appraiser and director. While these roles may seem unrelated to art, they equipped her with the skills to organize and manage an internationally recognized gallery that supports artists in their creative pursuits.

Since opening AzziArt Gallery in 2021, Aziza has worked with over 70 artists, hosting more than 200 exhibitions and a thousand workshops. Her gallery is more than just a place to view art—it's a center for learning and collaboration. Whether it's teaching kids as young as two years old, leading art classes for adults, or creating programs for children with autism, Aziza believes in making art accessible to everyone. She even incorporates sound healing and dance into her workshops, offering a creative experience that goes beyond the canvas.

Aziza's own artwork has made its way to international exhibitions, including the Florence Biennale and Montreux Art Festival. Her talent as a painter is matched by her ability to blend art with fashion, like the custom dress she painted with a world map for a UN conference. These projects highlight her resourcefulness and creativity, traits she brings to everything she does.

Beyond her gallery work, Aziza remains active in the community. She's a member of local arts councils and chambers of commerce, where she advocates for art programs that are affordable and open to all. From organizing art-and-sip nights to hosting cultural events that mix salsa dancing with painting, she finds innovative ways to bring people together through creativity.

For Aziza, art isn't just something to admire—it's something to share, something that can teach, heal, and connect. Through AzziArt Gallery LA, she's making art an experience everyone can enjoy, proving that its value lies in how it touches lives.

LIL MILE

A Grammy-nominated singer with an undeniable presence

Living the Music, Sharing His Story

LIL MILE is not your typical artist. With Grammy nomination under his belt and music charting in both the United States and Italy, he's proven that bringing together cultures and experiences can create something truly unique. But what makes him stand out is not just the music—it's the story behind it.

Born with Italian roots, Lil Mile started his journey far from the recording studio. Basketball was his first love, and he dedicated four years to college hoops before transitioning to music full-time. That competitive edge from the court now fuels his drive in the music world. Today, he's not only a celebrated artist but also the official face of Italy's top basketball league, a role that seamlessly connects his passions for both basketball and music.

His sound is as diverse as his background. Singing in English, Spanish, and Italian, Lil Mile doesn't shy away from experimenting with different genres. His collaborations with heavyweights like Helluva, The Game, Glasses Malone, and Roddy Ricch show his adaptability and determination to stay on top in an ever-evolving industry. Behind the scenes, he's worked with Kanye's sound engineers, Irko and Stef, which has elevated the production quality of his music to world-class standards.

But success hasn't come without its challenges. "No matter what happens in your life, you have to push through," he said during a recent conversation. "Sometimes you have to wear a mask in front of people and fans, pretending everything's okay." Lil Mile openly shares how personal losses, including family and friends, tested his strength. These moments shaped his music, giving it depth and a raw honesty that resonates with listeners.

What sets Lil Mile apart is his ability to connect deeply with his fans. Whether through heartfelt lyrics or sharing his personal struggles, he builds an emotional bridge that resonates with audiences around the world. His music is more than entertainment—it's an open dialogue about life's realities.

For Lil Mile, gratitude is the foundation of his life. "Every day I wake up, I'm grateful," he says. "Perseverance is what keeps you moving forward." He often draws inspiration from Oprah Winfrey's quote: "Be thankful for what you have; you'll end up having more." It's a mantra that has helped him stay focused on the positives, even during difficult times.

Whether he's performing on stage or inspiring young athletes as a basketball ambassador, Lil Mile is the embodiment of resilience. With his talent and drive, he's poised to make an even greater impact as the world continues to listen.

OLHA ROSHE

Reinventing Herself in Music and Life

Her Music, Her Courage, Her Story

OLHA ROSHE grew up in a Ukrainian village in the Odessa region, where music became as much a part of her life as the air she breathed. Born to a teacher and an electrician, her singing abilities were apparent from an early age. By the time she was ten, Olha had begun vocal lessons, her talent quickly making her a familiar presence at local events and festivals. Her voice and presence left a mark on everyone who listened.

As a teenager, Olha dedicated herself to mastering her craft. Excelling in music school, she developed her skills in both vocals and piano, becoming a standout performer. Her growing confidence and skill solidified her decision to fully commit to a life in music after high school.

At eighteen, Olha took a major step and moved to Kyiv to study at the Academy of Music. Over the next seven years, she refined her voice and technique, immersing herself in the artistry of music. During this time, she performed regularly, reaching new audiences and building her identity as an artist. Songwriting added another layer to Olha's artistry. Exploring pop, dance, and electronic styles, she began creating music that reflected her own experiences. Her songs were deeply personal, resonating with a raw authenticity that set her apart.

In 2022, Olha's life was thrown into chaos when Russia invaded Ukraine. Forced to flee her homeland, she undertook a perilous journey to the United States, where she faced detention at the border. Held for three days in harsh conditions, she felt both frustrated and disheartened. But even this experience couldn't break her resolve. After being granted asylum, she began piecing her life back together.

In New York, Olha's performances at open mic nights led her to meet producer Brian James McKeever, who was captivated by her talent and offered to collaborate on a solo project. This partnership became a turning point, allowing her music to reach new heights.

A move to Los Angeles opened even more doors. In addition to her music, Olha discovered a flair for acting, landing roles in Hollywood productions. She now divides her time between writing and recording songs, performing, and pursuing acting opportunities.

Olha's story is one of resilience and creativity. From her small village in Ukraine to the bustling cities of New York and Los Angeles, her experiences have shaped her music and driven her forward. With determination and an unyielding spirit, Olha continues to create and inspire, proving that even the hardest challenges can lead to something extraordinary.

A Voice That Inspires

KATE BODE, a Los Angeles-based singer, songwriter, and performer, has built a career that combines authenticity and creativity. Growing up in a musically inclined family, Kate was surrounded by melodies from an early age. Her grandfather, a gifted violinist with perfect pitch, and her supportive mother provided a strong foundation for her love of music.

Kate's childhood was filled with performances at local events, appearances on children's TV shows, and school competitions where she showcased her impressive vocal talent. She spent countless hours studying the powerhouse voices of Whitney Houston and Mariah Carey, who inspired her to refine her own vocal abilities.

As her talent grew, so did her opportunities. Kate performed internationally in France, Italy, and China, exploring different cultures and musical influences that added depth to her craft. However, it was her decision to move to Los Angeles that became a defining moment. Immersing herself in the city's vibrant music scene, Kate began to carve out her place in the industry. In Los Angeles, she collaborated with Todd Hunter, an accomplished pianist, composer, and producer. Hunter, known for his work with legends like Dionne Warwick and Whitney Houston, brought a refined sophistication to Kate's music. Their partnership elevated her skills and helped her explore new creative territories. Another influential figure in Kate's career is Stevie Mackey, a renowned vocal coach with an impressive roster of clients, including Jennifer Lopez and Selena Gomez. Under Mackey's mentorship, Kate refined her technique and discovered new dimensions in her voice. His guidance has been instrumental in her development as an artist.

Kate's talent shines brightest on stage. Performing at various venues across Los Angeles, she captivates audiences with her ability to connect through music. Her performances are more than entertainment—they are deeply personal expressions of her life and experiences.

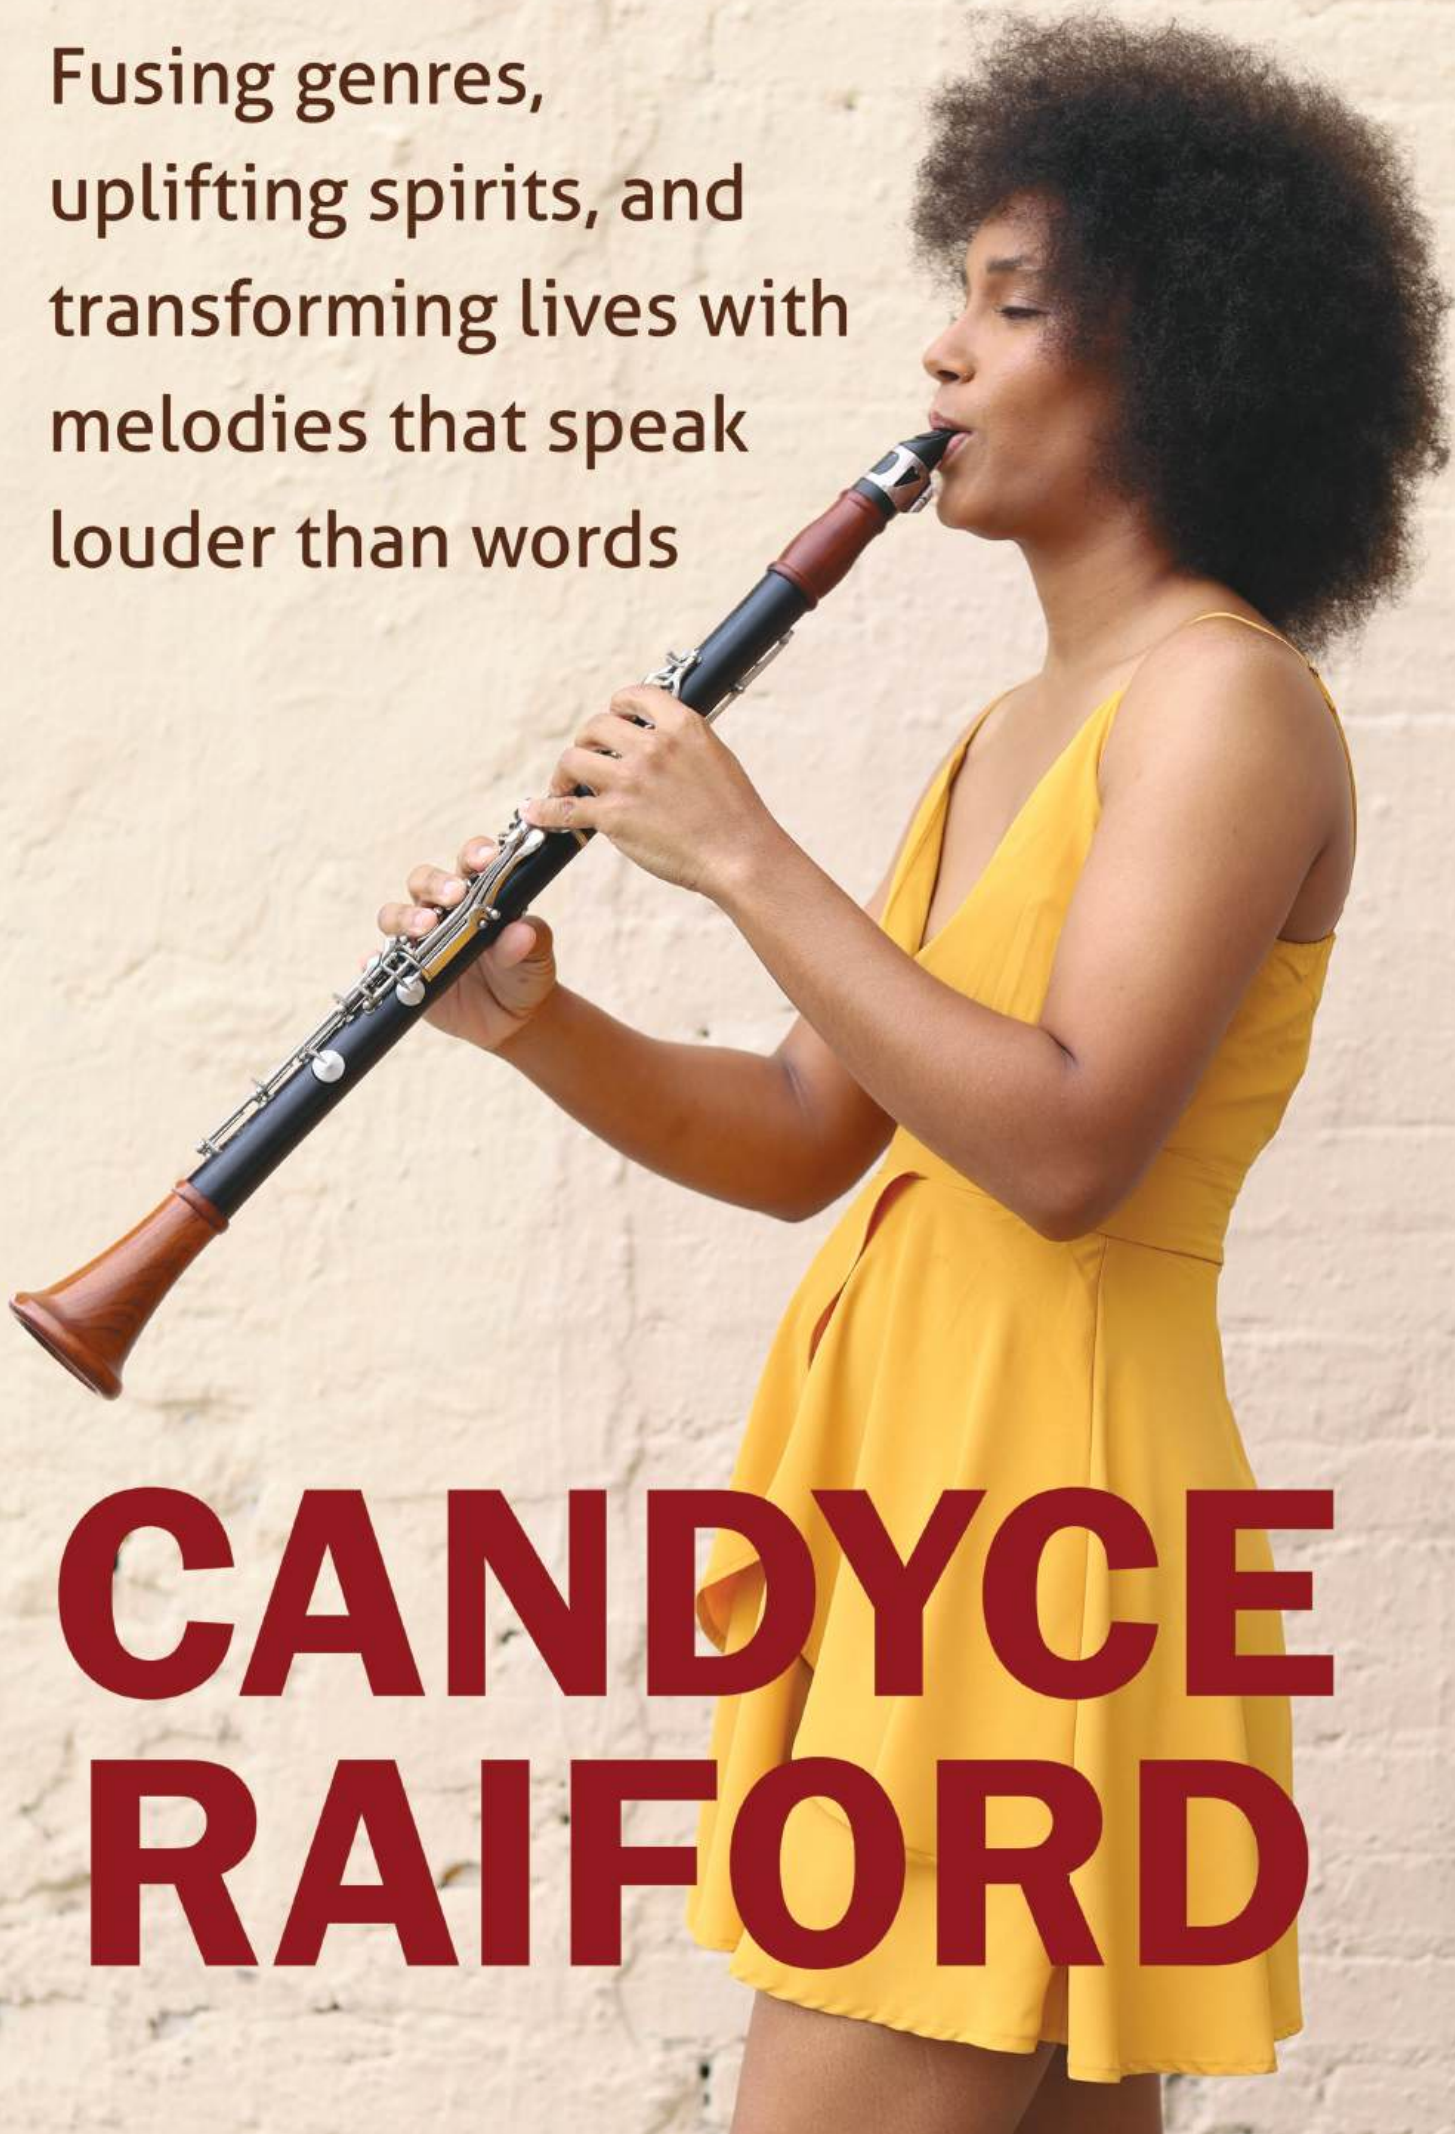

Beyond performing, Kate has embraced songwriting as a powerful outlet for storytelling.

CANDYCE RAIFORD

Music Became Her

CANDYCE RAIFORD has made it her mission to redefine music through an unconventional lens. As a former clarinetist with the First Marine Division Band, she merges classical and jazz influences into rap and R&B, creating a sound that is both innovative and unforgettable. Her ability to play glissando notes on the clarinet captivates listeners, offering a fresh perspective on an instrument often confined to traditional roles.

Music became a part of Candyce's life at the tender age of two, not by choice but by what she describes as a calling. Over the years, she has expanded her expertise, mastering the cello, violin, and piano to further enrich her compositions. These additional elements add depth to her sound, setting her apart in an industry where such combinations are rare.

Candyce is currently preparing to release her self-produced single, Mascara, a piece she composed in the unlikeliest of places—a medical facility's waiting room. Her music isn't confined to studio walls; she has performed at weddings, birthday celebrations, and even proposals staged on cliff sides. Each performance reflects her ability to bring something unique and heartfelt to every occasion.

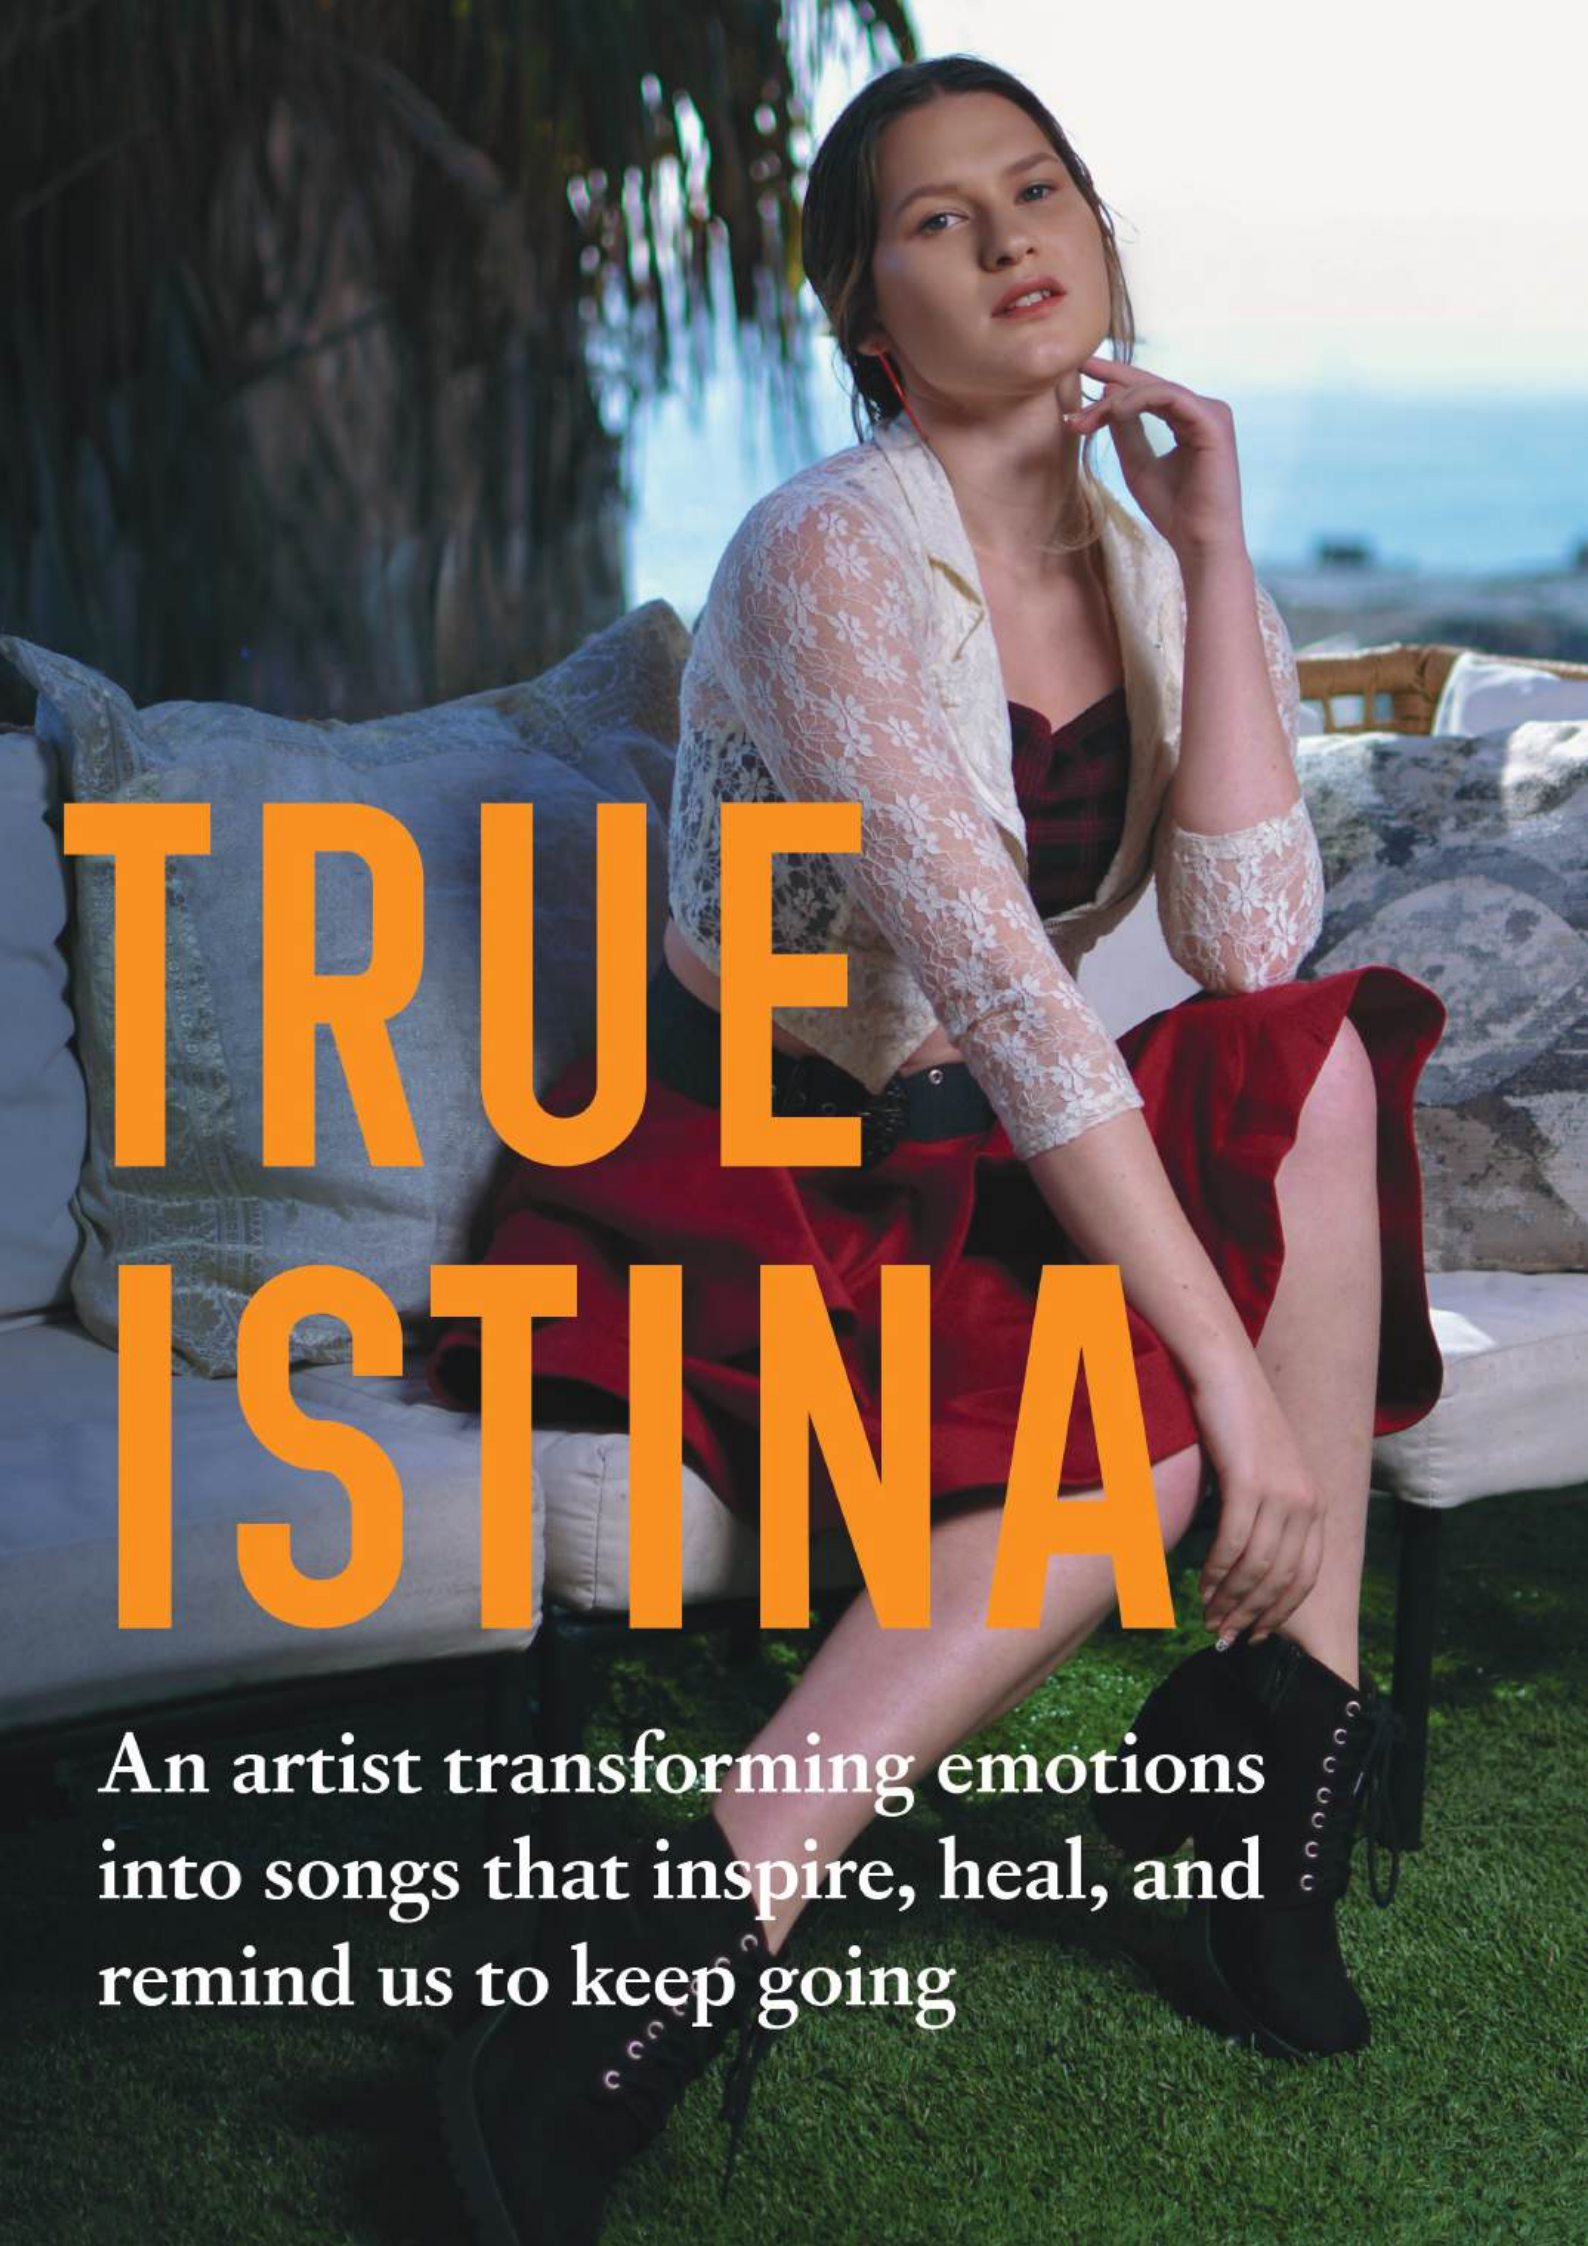

Her story is one of resilience and creativity. After surviving early challenges, including a difficult start in life and raised in foster care and group homes, Candyce found solace and purpose in the performing arts.

From winning school talent shows judged by the likes of Ice-T to earning accolades as an exceptional musician and bandsman, her dedication led her to a meritorious promotion in the United States Marine Corps. Her time in service provided opportunities to perform for notable audiences, including the cast of Sons of Anarchy, and to collaborate with industry icons like Busta Rhymes.

Candyce's influence extends beyond her own music. She has appeared as a cellist in the music video Last Resort Reimagined by Falling in Reverse and Smile by Chase Bell. She has also been featured as a keys player for J Hart's Ripe and has shared the stage with Mark Christopher Lawrence at the North Coast Repertory Theatre's Tuesday Night Comics.

Candyce views music as a form of healing, a way to connect and inspire where words or medicine might fail. Her life experiences fuel her commitment to uplifting others, especially foster and at-risk youth. By demonstrating that obstacles can be overcome, she encourages Others to believe in their worth and pursue their dreams. Candyce's artistry is proof of the boundless possibilities that emerge when talent and purpose align.

An artist transforming emotions into songs that inspire, heal, and remind us to keep going

Songs That Inspire Confidence

TRUE ISTINA doesn't just write songs—she creates a space where listeners can feel understood. In the Acoustic, Pop, and Alternative music scenes, she stands out as an artist who transforms personal truths into melodies that resonate deeply. Her music carries a simple yet profound message: every feeling matters, and every voice deserves to be heard.

What began as a private outlet for processing emotions has grown into something far greater. Songwriting became her way to navigate life's toughest moments, capturing raw, unfiltered emotions on the pages of her songbook. Over time, she realized these deeply personal songs held a universal appeal, offering comfort and understanding to others facing similar struggles. That realization inspired her to share her work, not for fame or recognition, but to make a difference in someone else's life.

Her love for music started early. At just two years old, she was singing, and by five, she was harmonizing in her mother's music classes. These formative years shaped her unique ability to blend emotion and sound—a skill woven into every track she creates. Her efforts were soon recognized on a global stage when she won gold and silver medals at The World Championship of Performing Arts, affirming her path as an artist.

Her self-titled album, True Istina, serves as both a reflection of her own experiences and a guiding light for others. Tracks like "For Fun" and "Fantasy" tackle life's challenges with a mix of honesty and optimism, encouraging listeners to embrace their feelings while looking toward brighter days. The success of her music videos, with nearly 100,000 combined views, highlights her growing influence as an independent artist.

On stage, True Istina captivates audiences with heartfelt performances that go beyond entertainment. From iconic venues like the House of Blues to intimate settings in Las Vegas, her shows leave audiences inspired by her authenticity and connection.

Looking to the future, she plans to release her second album in 2025 and dreams of performing globally. Her vision extends beyond music; she hopes to create a nonprofit that empowers children to build confidence and self-worth.

Her message is simple yet powerful: embrace your emotions, take life one step at a time, and never give up. Through her music, True Istina continues to show that healing and strength are always within reach.

COURTNEY TYLER

HIGHLIGHTING THE BEAUTY OF
REAL PEOPLE AND MOMENTS

Uncovering Authenticity in a Fast-Paced World

COURTNEY TYLER'S story begins in Fayetteville, NC, where the structure of military life laid the groundwork for his future.

Sixteen years into serving in the United States Navy, Courtney stumbled upon something that changed his perspective: a camera. What started as a simple interest grew into a tool that allowed him to connect with people and their stories in ways he never expected.

Photography wasn't something Courtney planned for; it found him. In the beginning, it was all about learning to take better pictures, but the process soon became more personal. Courtney realized it wasn't just about technical details—it was about the people. Every face he captured had a unique story, a moment worth preserving. He dedicated himself to finding those moments, the ones that reveal something real about a person, and making them unforgettable. The challenge hasn't always been in taking the photos.

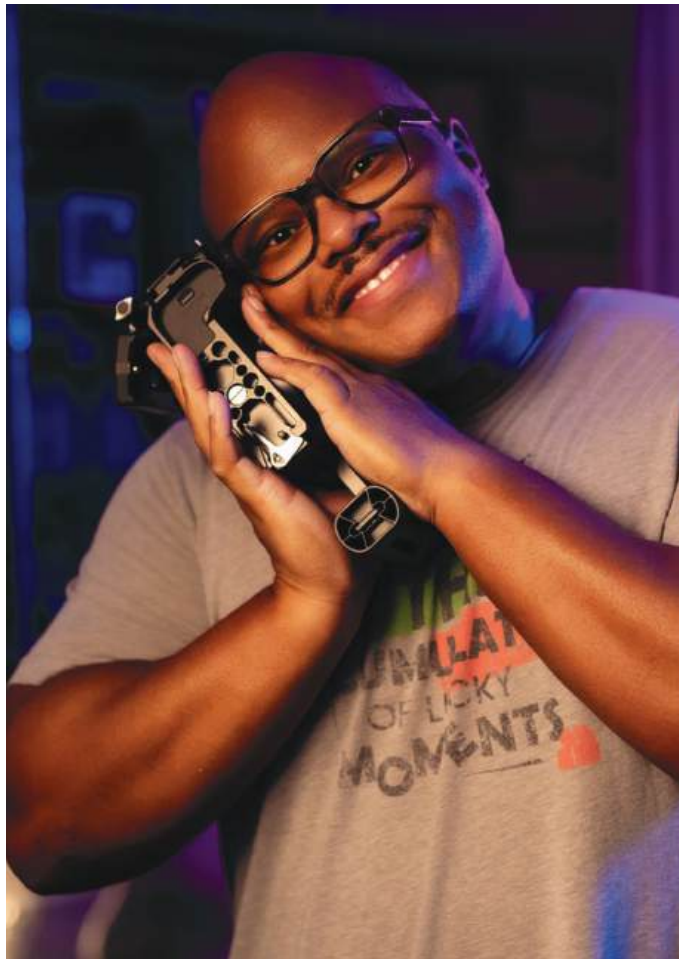

For Courtney, the hardest part has been finding people who value the process as much as the final product. In a world filled with quick snapshots and fleeting trends, the art of storytelling through photography can feel overlooked. But instead of letting that discourage him, he focuses on those who do care. Those connections mean everything, and they are what keep him moving forward.

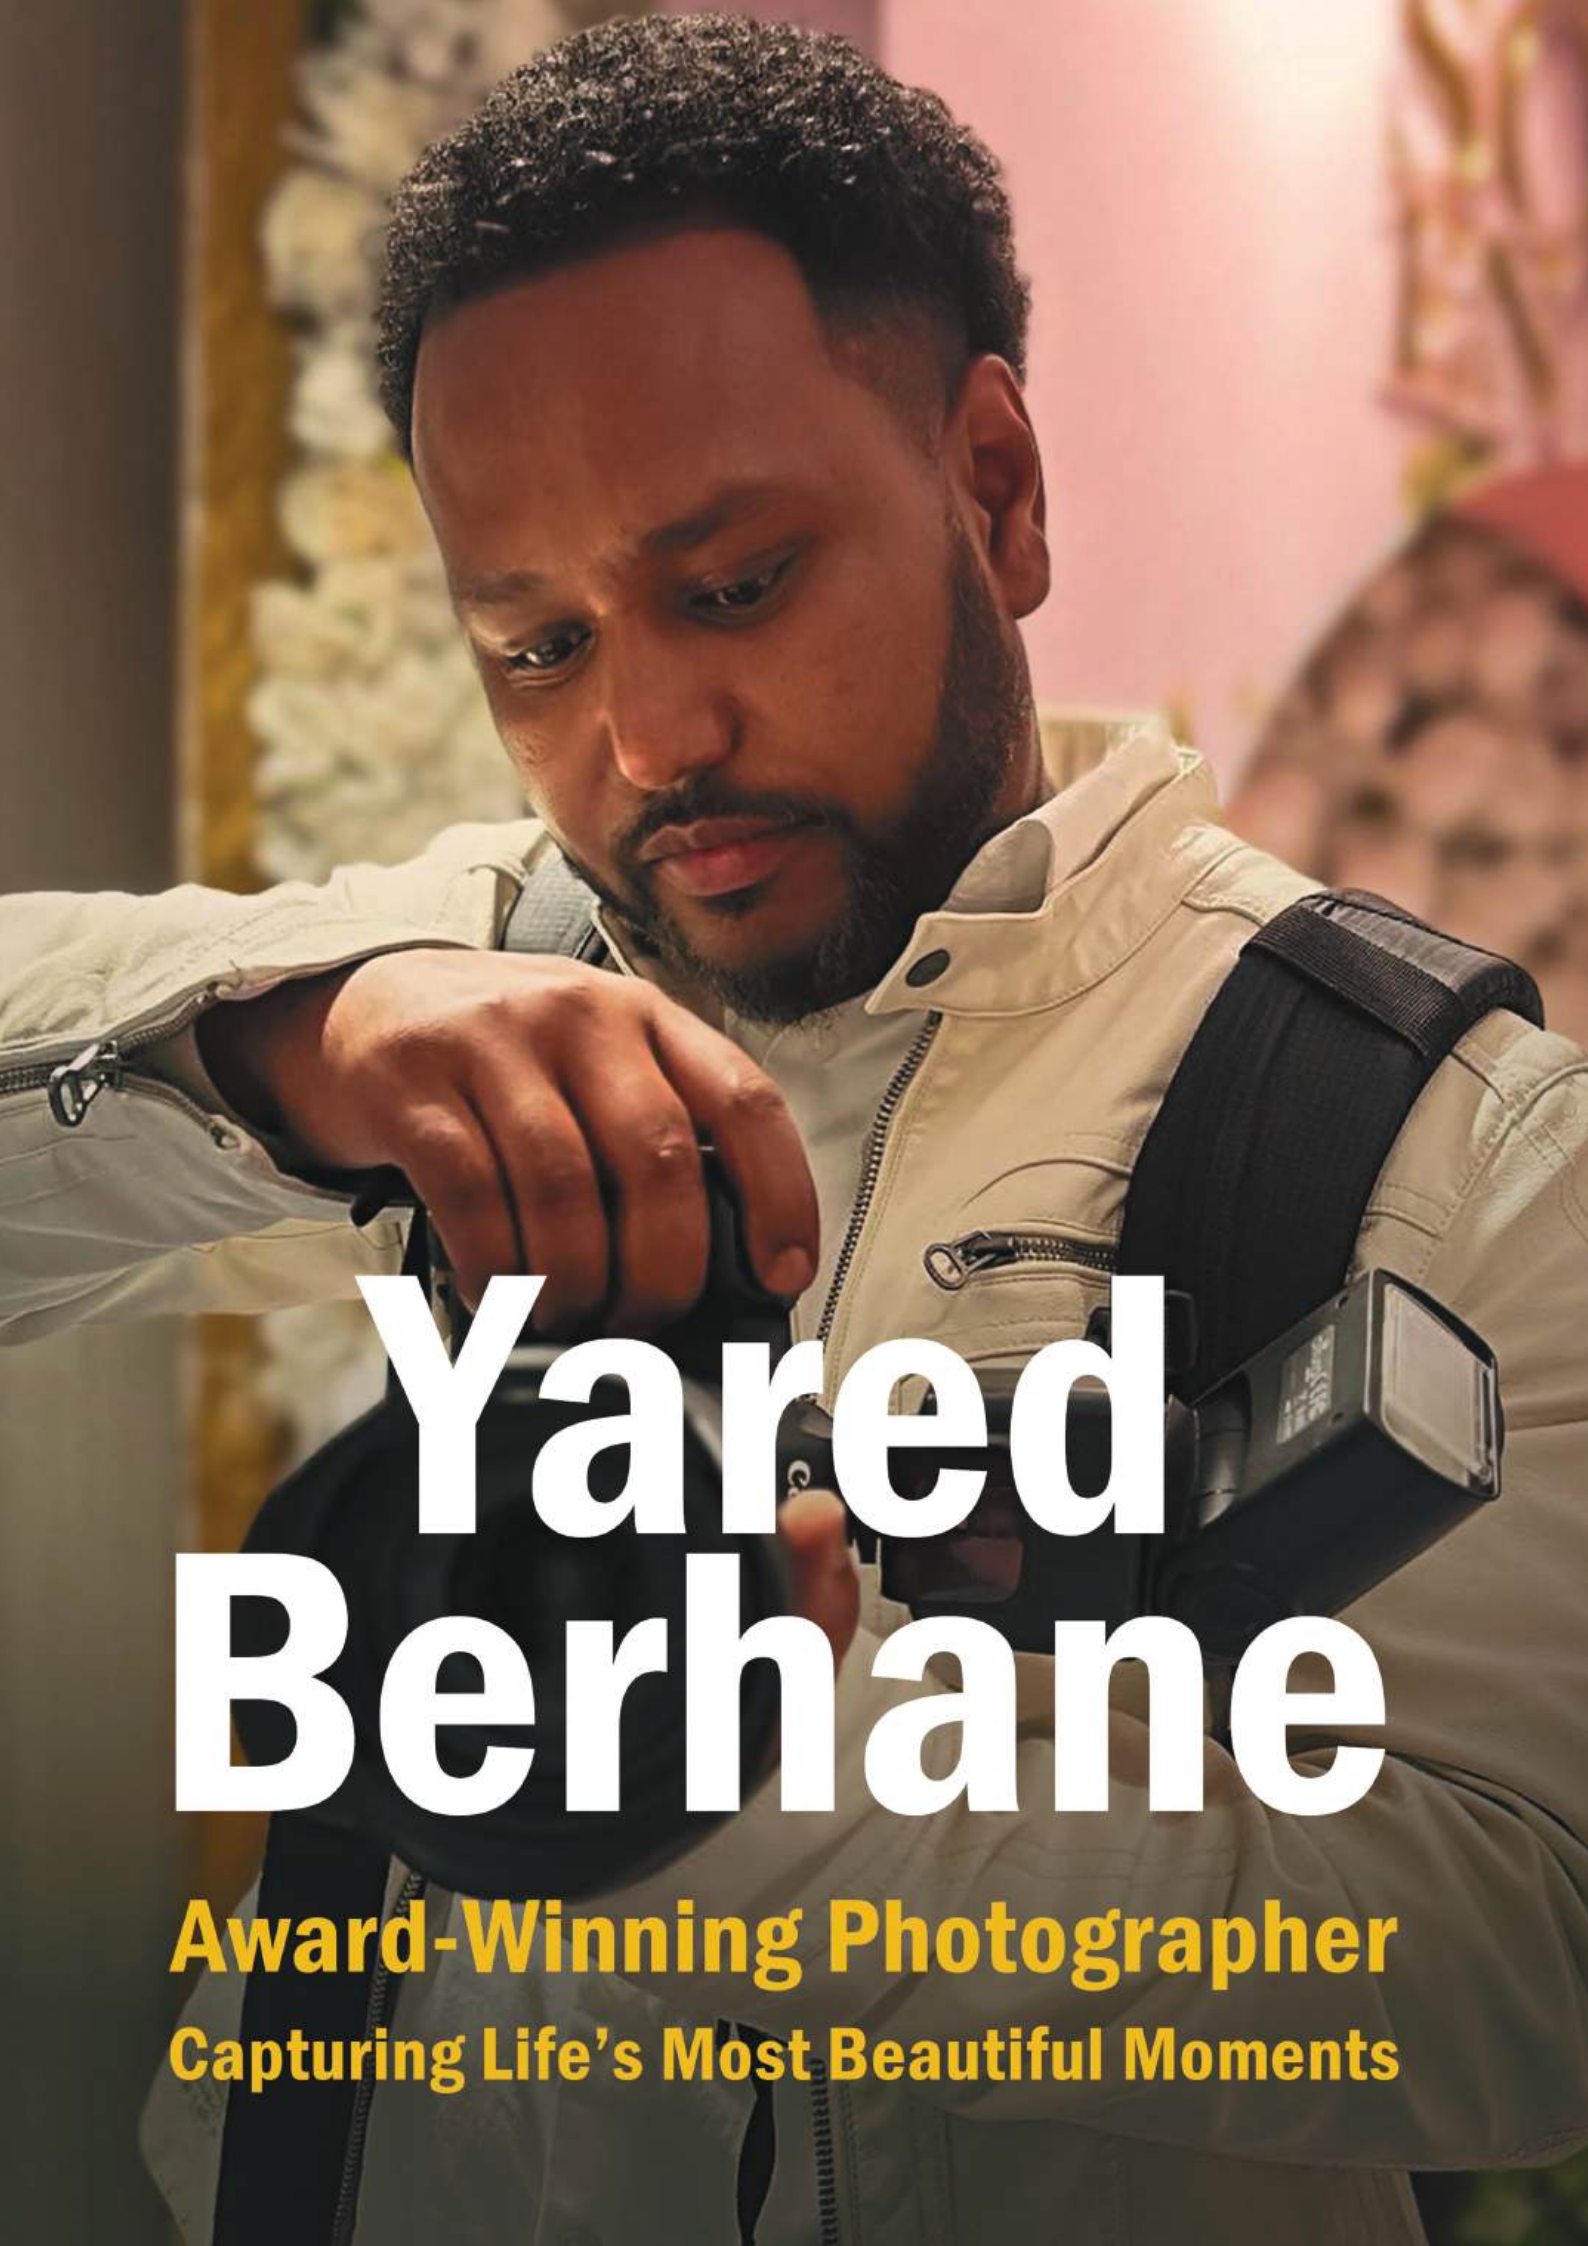

Courtney doesn't need grand gestures to feel fulfilled in his work. A simple, authentic smile is enough. When someone feels comfortable enough to let their guard down and share that kind of moment with him, he knows he's doing exactly what he set out to do. It's not about perfection—it's about honesty.

As he approaches his final years in active service, Courtney's vision for the future is clear. He wants to step behind the camera in a new way, producing and directing films that continue the storytelling he's already begun through photography. It's not a shift for him, just a natural extension of what he's already built—a way to share bigger stories with larger audiences.

Courtney's message is simple but powerful: "Focus on what matters, the things that feel real. Whether it's a smile, a moment, or a person, those are the things worth holding on to. That's where the magic happens."

Yared Berhane

Award-Winning Photographer
Capturing Life's Most Beautiful Moments

Behind the Glamour, Beyond the Camera

YARED BERHANE has become a distinguished name in photography, celebrated for his expertise in fashion, editorial, and high-profile event photography. With achievements such as Best Independent Photographer at the 2024 HAPA Awards and Best Photographer of the Year at the Los Angeles Fashion Show in 2023, his work speaks volumes about his talent and professionalism.

Based in Elk Grove, with a presence in the Bay Area and Los Angeles, Yared has established a unique space in the photography world. His portfolio boasts striking images of celebrities at red-carpet events, runway shows, and exclusive gatherings. Gaining credentials for prestigious platforms like New York Fashion Week and the Las Vegas Super Bowl commission, he has positioned himself among the top-tier photographers in the industry.

For Yared, photography is about more than capturing a moment; it is about the connections and stories that unfold behind the scenes. "Securing credentials and covering celebrity events comes with its own set of challenges," he shares. "It takes consistent effort and a clear focus to stay ahead in such a competitive field." His success has been built on a foundation of relentless dedication and a willingness to adapt to the ever-changing demands of the industry.

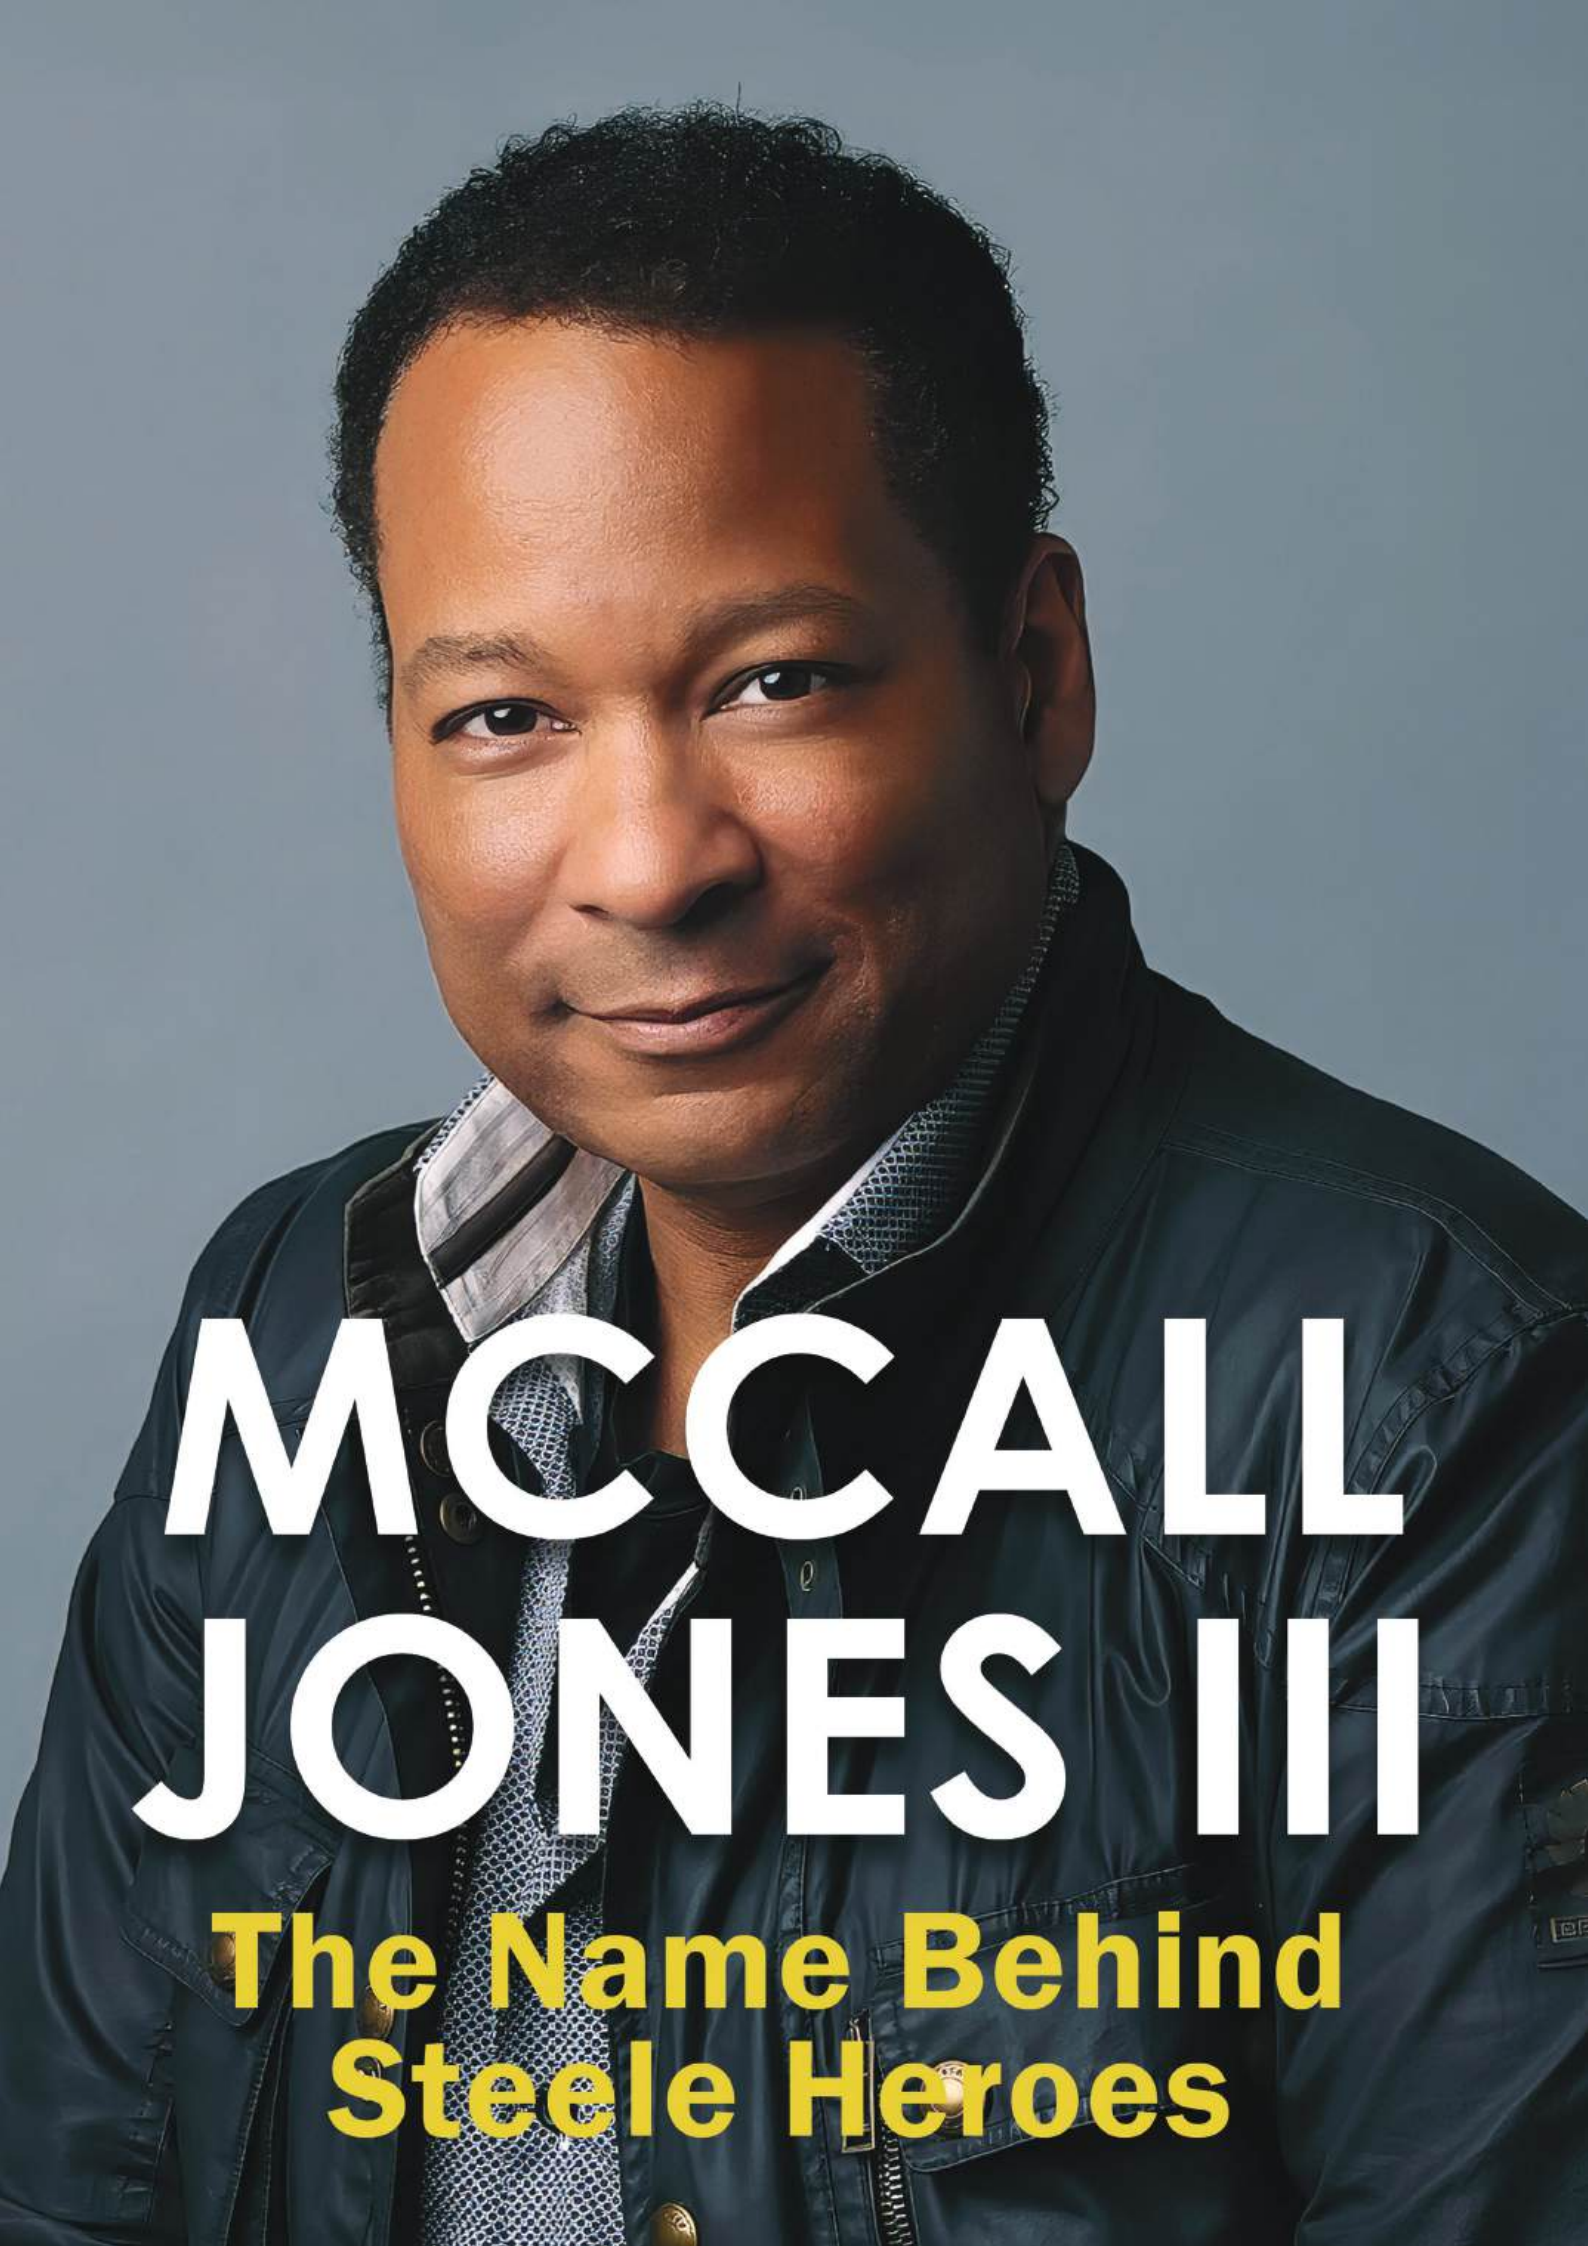

Despite his professional milestones, Yared remains deeply grounded. Raised in a household rooted in Eritrean culture, he carries those values into his life today as a devoted father to twin toddlers and a fiancé. Family forms the heart of his happiness, offering him balance and purpose amid a demanding career. He finds equal joy in music and art, which inspire his work and provide moments of relaxation.

Reflecting on the challenges of his career, Yared acknowledges that freelancing in a competitive environment is not without its hurdles. "It's easy to get caught up in comparing yourself to others, but the key is staying focused on your own goals," he advises. "Opportunities may not always come with immediate rewards, but they often hold long-term value if approached with persistence."

Yared's philosophy extends beyond his craft. His message to humanity is one of unity and mutual respect. "We should celebrate each other's unique cultures and backgrounds, rejecting hate and violence in all its forms," he says.

MCCALL JONES III

The Name Behind
Steele Heroes

Fusing Art and Emotion in Photography

MCCALL JONES III is one of the few names that resonate distinctly in the world of photography and digital campaigns. Beginning his career as a news photographer, he captured significant moments of human experience, later transitioning into fashion photography, where his ability to craft compelling visuals took center stage. This shift opened a new avenue for storytelling, which eventually led him to the fast-paced world of commercial advertising.

Over 15 years, Jones collaborated with some of the world's largest advertising agencies and worked with global brands like Honda, Canon, Bandai, and Sony Pictures. This extensive experience laid the foundation for a bold move: stepping out independently to create his own production company, Steele Heroes Media, and later establishing McCall Jones Photography in 2023.

At the core of Jones's work lies a unique ability to uncover and present stories that may not be immediately visible. Through meticulous use of lenses, lighting, and composition, he creates imagery that captures truths others might overlook. His process requires mastery not only of the tools of the trade but also of the emotional nuances of his subjects. This dedication to understanding the human element is what truly sets him apart. Jones's career has been marked by a steadfast commitment to his craft, even in the face of challenges. He emphasizes the importance of daily focus, especially when long-term goals feel unattainable. By continuously realigning his priorities and addressing immediate steps, Jones navigates through distractions and keeps moving forward.

A self-described introvert, Jones acknowledges the transformative power of his camera as a tool for connection. "People often reveal their most vulnerable selves during the photographic process," he shares. From documenting defining moments in the lives of strangers to creating portraits of internationally recognized individuals, he approaches each subject with respect and care.

This perspective was shaped by his early work in news and documentary photography, where he often captured people on either the best or worst day of their lives. Recognizing this trust as a profound responsibility, Jones prioritizes authenticity, meeting his subjects where they are, and ensuring their true essence shines through.

Whether working with private individuals or public figures, Jones maintains a clear focus on their humanity. His photography goes beyond technical skill, creating images that leave a lasting impression. As McCall Jones III continues to expand his creative vision, his ability to connect on a human level solidifies his reputation as a storyteller with a distinctive voice, capturing the world one frame at a time.
